NOT CONFIRMED.

Sighting of the Maria Teresa Discredited at Nassau.

NASSAU, N. P., Nov. 8.—No information is obtainable here which in any way tends to confirm the report, in circulation in the United States, that cruiser Infanta Maria Teresa has been sighted aground off Cat Island, in the Bahama group. The rumor is discredited here.

WITHOUT ADVICES.

Yet the Navy Department Sends Vessels to Learn the Truth.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—The Navy Department is without advices concerning the Maria Teresa, but acting on newspaper statements of her reported stranding on Cat island, in the Walling group, has sent orders to the Vulcan at Norfolk and the Potomac at Santiago to leave immediately for Cat island, and if the vessel is found to do everything possible to save her. The expedition will be under command of Captain McCalla, who commanded the Marblehead in the Spanish war and is now in charge of the Norfolk navy yard. The Vulcan should reach the scene in forty-eight hours, and the Potomac in less time.

NO SESSION TODAY.

American Peace Commission Asks Time to Translate Its Reply.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The Spanish-American peace commissioners have notified the minister of foreign affairs, M. Delcasse, that the joint session which was to have taken place today will not be held, and that they will notify the minister when they have determined upon the date of another meeting. Later a semi-official note was issued announcing that the peace commissioners had informed the French minister of foreign affairs that their conferences were suspended.

Inquiry developed the fact that the failure to hold a meeting of the commissions today was only due to the Americans' asking for a postponement of the joint session until tomorrow, in order to allow time for the translation of the reply of the United States to the latest Spanish propositions regarding the Philippine islands, which was received this morning.

AFTER THREE MONTHS.

Marlboro Shoe Factory to Start, Probably as a Free Shop.

MARLBORO, Mass., Nov. 8.—After a shutdown of nearly three months, Rice & Hutchins, proprietors of the Middlesex shoe factory, announce that it will be re-opened Thursday next. The factory was closed in August owing to a strike of the stitchers, who objected to the presence of one of the forewomen, whom the firm refused to discharge. The factory will likely be operated as a "free" shop, and it is thought other manufacturers will attempt to employ non-union men. The Middlesex employs 200 hands when running in full.

PANAMA AT NEW YORK.

Boxes and Other Material Thrown Over to Clear Decks.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—United States transport Panama, from Santiago and Havana, about whose safety fears were entertained, creating considerable excitement prior to her arrival at Havana, arrived in quarantine at 6:10 this morning.

Captain Hanlon was much surprised to learn at quarantine that any uneasiness had been felt for the ship's safety. He said that shortly after leaving Santiago he ordered the vessel cleaned up between decks. Numerous boxes and other material were thrown overboard and drifted towards shore, and this no doubt gave rise to the report that the transport had been wrecked.

The Panama had the bodies of Captain W. N. Dickinson and Lieutenant Dennis M. Michie, Seventeenth infantry; Lieutenant Thomas A. Wansboro, Seventh infantry; Sergeant M. D. Russell, First volunteer cavalry; and, of the Second Massachusetts volunteer infantry, Fred P. Taft, Silas Undergrave, Jr., F. Hackeuser, James Wheeler, Harvey Randall, W. C. Greene and J. C. King. There were also on board many sick soldiers belonging to regiments at Santiago, including the Fifth United States infantry, Twenty-third Kansas, Eighth Illinois and Second, Third, Fifth and Ninth immunes.

DEPENDS UPON THE ELECTIONS.

French Paper Expects They Will Favor the Republicans.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The Gaulois this morning, referring to today's sitting of the peace commissions, says it will in no way modify the Spanish-American situation, "as the American commissioners have orders to await further instructions from Washington." The Gaulois then says these instructions will depend upon the result of the elections, which, the paper mentioned thinks, will be favorable to the Republicans, adding: "The American government will eventually recognize that pecuniary compensation is due to Spain for the evacuation of the Philippine islands, and the negotiations will continue and be brought to a satisfactory conclusion in a friendly spirit."

SIX COUNTS AGAINST HIM.

Nineteen-Year-Old Boy Arrested for Passing Bogus Checks.

WATERVILLE, Me., Nov. 8.—Word is received by Marshal Reuben A. Call of the capture of Herbert L. Jones by the Boston police Monday night at 18 Bowdoin street. Jones is the nineteen-year-old boy wanted for passing bogus checks and fraudulent transactions with merchants and farmers hereabouts, there being six known counts against him. He is at present confined at station 3 and will leave Boston at 7 tonight, having a hearing before Judge Shaw Wednesday.

Father Accidentally Shot by His Son.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 8.—A special from Traverse City says: Word has been received here of the accidental death of Judge Roscoe L. Corbett of the Thirteenth judicial district. His death was caused by an accidental discharge of a gun held by his son. Father and son were on a deer hunting expedition at Trout Lake.

Second Edition.

THE VOTING.

Weather Favorable and a Large Poll Expected.

Reports from the Congressional and State Contests.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The weather was clear and fresh and cool this morning. The polls opened at 7 o'clock, and the early morning vote was quite up to the best averages. Nowhere was any trouble reported during the first three hours of balloting; there were comparatively few votes challenged, and in all but a few instances the person challenged swore in his vote and went about his business. The blanket ballot has become familiar to most New Yorkers and the marking of it occupied but little time. At the last state election 122,000 blank or defective ballots were cast. Party lines are more closely drawn than they were in 1896, when Democrats were divided on the currency issue. In that year many ballots were invalidated by the attempts of voters to scratch without being fully informed as to the effect of their marking.

It cannot be said that any particular vote—Democratic or Republican—showed itself distinctively in the hours of the morning. The merchant and the mechanic, the clerk and the day laborer, were in evidence at the polls just about in the degree that they were out in the early hours of other recent election days. Almost all the manufacturing concerns shut down for the day and banks and brokers and insurance offices were closed. The polls will close at 5 o'clock.

At 9:30 more than one-third of the vote had been cast in the city and it was tagged at the political headquarters that the full vote registered would be cast. No trouble occurred up to 10 o'clock, though there had been about a dozen arrests on warrants. Some of these were on technical grounds and others were due to clerical errors. They were discharged at once.

Advices from representative localities in the state, outside of the big cities, show that the favorable weather conditions are general. The voting generally may be characterized as large, judging from the predominance of "heavy voting" reports. In Schenectady the morning polling was light, but the big industrial concerns will close this afternoon and put 6,000 voters on the streets. These conditions exist in several cities. Country roads are in good shape, and the farmers' vote will be proportionately heavy.

DEMOCRATS SAY NOTHING.

Pennsylvania Republicans and Prohibitionists Both Confident.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Nov. 8.—Election day opened cloudy and raw, with indications of rain later in the day. The polls opened at 7 o'clock and will close at the same hour this evening. Voting is progressing slowly, and thus far there appears to be but little scratching on the head of the ticket. There will be probably from 195,000 to 210,000 votes polled in Philadelphia, which is a very large vote. The Republicans claim the city by 65,000 plurality for Stone, the Prohibitionists claim Dr. Swallow, their candidate, will have a plurality of 15,000, while the Democrats have not given out any figures.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Nov. 8.—Election day opened clear and pleasant, and an hour after the opening an unusually heavy vote had been cast. There was a great deal of scratching and the indications were that Jenks, Democratic candidate for governor, would run considerably ahead of the ticket. There was no fight on the Congressional tickets, and the prospects were that Dalzell and Acheson would be re-elected and that W. H. Graham would succeed Stone in the Twenty-third district.

BOTH SIDES ACTIVE.

Close Fights in Contested Massachusetts Districts.

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—The weather throughout the state today was favorable to a large attendance of voters at the polling places; in both country and city. The forenoon was perfectly clear and a light wind from the south giving promise of a slowly rising temperature.

Both parties in this city were very active and the voting was up to the average in nearly every ward. The balloting was heavy in the North End wards, South Boston and other sections in the Seventh, Ninth and Tenth Congressional districts, where animated contests exist. In the Ninth district, where there are two Democratic candidates, the voting was very heavy. The opponents of Congressman John F. Fitzgerald, both within and without the Democratic party, were very active; but his friends also worked hard and claimed he would be elected, but with a reduced plurality. The contest in the Tenth, between Congressman Burrows, Republican, and H. J. Naphen, Democratic, brought a very large percentage of voters in the Boston wards of the district this morning. The district is in doubt.

The Democrats were very active in the Seventh district and threw a heavy vote early in the Charleston section. It is believed the vote polled by Senator Roberts, the Republican candidate, and Walter L. Ramsdell, Democrat, will be close. In this part of the state the state ticket, which is conceded to the Republicans by a large plurality, is not attracting great attention.

Up to noon the balloting in and about the city was unattended by disorder, and little excitement was reported from any section. No arrests were made in the city this morning. Reports from the Seventh congressional district indicate that Ramsdell, Democrat, is running ahead of the state ticket in several cities. The voting in the Ninth and Tenth continues heavy in most of the polling places up to noon, with the result as much in doubt as ever. Reports from Fall River state that a large percentage of cotton mill employes voted and that the Republican plurality will be cut down one half in that city. A heavy Democratic vote is also being cast in Lawrence, the home of Alexander Bruce, Democratic candidate for governor, and a despatch from Lowell says that the vote for Congressman Knox is much lighter than in 1896.

ALL SETTLED IN RHODE ISLAND.

Large Vote Being Polled in the Up-State Cities.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 8.—The re-election of Melville Bull and Adin B. Capron, Republican candidates for Congress, is assured, the Democratic leaders having conceded that their defeat is impossible. A heavy vote is being polled in the city, the Republican voters turning out in large numbers in support of Colonel F. F. Olney, their candidate for mayor. The Democrats are also doing considerable hustling and claim that they will re-elect Mayor Baker, but by a somewhat reduced plurality. The weather is all that could be desired and this tends to increase the chances of Republican success.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Nov. 8.—The election for city officers and Congressman brought out a large vote here today, the municipal campaign having been a hot and bitter one. The parties are so confused on local affairs that party lines are not being drawn, many Republicans uniting with the Democrats to defeat the machine and many Democrats leaving their party to combine with the machine Republicans. Indications are that a strong Republican city council will be elected, while the issue between Cronin, Democrat, and White, Republican, for the mayoralty, is in doubt. The city will throw a strong Republican majority for Congressman.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Nov. 8.—Fine weather conditions today favor the Republicans in the city and Congressional elections. Indications are that the city will remain Republican by 100 or more plurality. In one ward, where an independent ticket opposes the Republican city council ticket, supporters of the former are working for the Republican mayoralty nominee, William S. Hopkins, against ex-Mayor George W. Greene, Democrat. Socialists have no city ticket and are withholding their vote.

INTEREST NOT GREAT.

Revised State Constitution Likely to be Approved.

[Special despatch to the News.]

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 8.—Reports from various sections of the state show an unusually light vote. This was expected in the towns, where the Congressional election is the only feature, but it was thought that, with the municipal elections, the vote would be heavy in the cities. At noon, however, the contrary was reported, except in Pawtucket, where the poll was a little above the average. In this city the vote is very light, and the absence of the registry voters is a marked feature. A heavier vote is expected this afternoon, but the total will evidently be smaller than usual. Central Falls reports a light vote and not much interest. Woonsocket predicts a Republican victory.

The revised state constitution seems to be receiving a pretty strong endorsement in the cities and in some towns, but in a few towns down South county way a rather heavy vote is reported to be going in against it.

THE CONGRESSIONAL CONTESTS

Republican Hopes High and Democrats Confident.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Republican hopes were higher than ever today at Republican Congressional headquarters as a result of the many telegrams to Chairman Babcock telling of good weather east and west and a heavy early vote. Chairman Babcock's efforts have been directed, he says, toward dispelling the apathy which existed in the early part of the campaign. Had there been a bad day in New York, he says, the Republicans might have lost 20,000 votes on that account.

From Representative Overstreet, secretary of the committee, Mr. Babcock received the following telegram dated Indianapolis: "Condition in Indiana still favorable. Confidently expect Republican victory."

Democratic headquarters were practically deserted during the day. Chairman Kerr and all the officers had gone home to vote and no telegrams had been received up to noon. Chairman Kerr will return to Washington during the afternoon. At Democratic headquarters, however, predictions of Democratic success were made with great confidence. Returns will be received at both headquarters tonight.

M'KINLEY'S VOTE.

Little More Than a Minute Needed to Prepare It.

CANTON, Ohio, Nov. 8.—President McKinley reached Canton at 9:25 o'clock on a special train. Accompanying him were Mrs. McKinley, General Hastings, Assistant Secretary Cortelyou and Stenographer Rudolph Foster. A number of the President's old friends were at the depot to meet him. The fact that his train was not expected until an hour later was responsible for a comparatively small crowd at the depot. The party took carriages and were driven to the M. C. Barber home.

The President exchanged greetings at the house, and then, accompanied by eight or ten of his old friends, started for the polling place of his precinct of the ward. At the voting place the President greeted the election officials with a hearty handshake. His registration number was called out as 192 and he was handed ballot 133. He was in the booth a little more than a minute, after which he deposited his ballot and returned to the Barber home for luncheon.

TESLA'S LATEST.

Electrical Engine of Destruction of Almost Infinite Power.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—At the moment when all the world is ringing with rumors of an impending colossal conflict there comes from the laboratory of one of the great magicians of science the announcement of the development of a power which he believes is destined immediately to usher in the era of universal peace by the demonstration of its ability to destroy, without the possibility of defense, the mightiest armaments of all the naval powers.

In the words of Nikola Tesla, uttered today: "War will cease to be possible when all the world knows tomorrow that the most feeble of the nations can supply itself immediately with a weapon which will render its coast secure and its ports impregnable to the assaults of the united armadas of the world. Battleships will cease to be built, and the mightiest armorclads and the most tremendous artillery afloat will be of no more use than so much scrap iron. And this irresistible power can be exerted at any distance by an agency of so delicate, so impalpable a quality that I feel that I am justified in predicting that the time will come, incredible as it may seem, when it can be called into action by the mere exercise of the human will."

In brief, Mr. Tesla's latest and most startling miracle consists in an application of electricity whereby, without the intervention of any artificial medium of communication, one man can control another, direct with absolute exactitude the movements of any type of vessel, balloon or land vehicle at any distance that may be desired.

From a station on shore or from the deck of a vessel under way, a torpedo boat equipped with Mr. Tesla's controlling device may be propelled either on or below the surface, maneuvered at will in any direction, and finally be brought into contact and exploded against the side of a hostile vessel at any point within the range of the operator.

More than this, assuming that it were possible to accurately locate the position of the vessel which it is desired to destroy, the torpedo boat could be directed to it, even if the ship lay in the harbor of Southampton and the operator were stationed at Sandy Hook.

With such marvelous possibilities of destruction, it is hardly to be wondered that Mr. Tesla believes that the days of the supremacy of sea power are numbered.

Mr. Tesla said that some months had elapsed since he had fully developed his device. When it was learned that Admiral Cervera was bottled up at Santiago, it was his intention to apply his mechanism to several launches and similar small craft loaded with high explosives and annihilate the fleet at anchor. Admiral Cervera, however, came on and met his fate under the guns of the American fleet before the necessary arrangements could be made.

Then Mr. Tesla planned a raid on the Spanish vessels in Havana harbor, only to be thwarted by the proclamation of the suspension of hostilities.

While the most important application of the device is unquestionably in the direction of destruction, it will also have countless peaceful uses, and it is Mr. Tesla's highest pride that by making war too terrible it will render it impossible.

DID SHE SINK?

Maria Teresa May Have Drifted Ashore.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Advices received in this city today by James E. Ward & Co., agents of the Ward line, indicate that, instead of having sunk in 300 fathoms of water, armored cruiser Maria Teresa remained afloat after she was abandoned by her crew, only to go ashore on Cat island, about 150 miles west of the point where she was abandoned. The news came in a dispatch from agents of the Ward line.

While much secrecy is preserved, it is learned that a large steamship with two funnels, and resembling a war cruiser, has been seen ashore on Cat island. The wind, according to Commander Harris, was blowing from the northeast when the Maria Teresa was abandoned, and the current was setting to the westward. These two forces combined would have driven the Maria Teresa, if she remained afloat, toward Cat island from the place where she was abandoned, thirty miles west of San Salvador.

It is significant, in this connection, that no one has yet been found who saw the Maria Teresa sink. She was laboring heavily, but still afloat, when, last Thursday afternoon, her officers and crew left her on wrecking tug L. J. Merritt. When the Merritt and repair ship Vulcan left the cruiser they could still see "Old Glory" snapping defiantly from her signal yard. The Merritt made a search for the wreck next day, but, being unable to find it, the men on board came to the conclusion that the vessel had foundered.

Alfred G. Smith, secretary of the Ward line, admitted today that his company had received news of the sighting of a vessel in the shoal water south of Cat Island which answered the description of the Maria Teresa, but refused to tell its source. All the information in the possession his company has has been turned over to the Merritt & Chapman Wrecking Company. At the office of the Merritt & Chapman company those in charge declared that nothing could be told until more definite information had been obtained.

If the news that the cruiser has not been lost proves to be true, it means a mint to the Merritt & Chapman Wrecking Company. The contract with the government provided that the company be paid $800 a day for conducting wrecking operations on the Spanish ships at Santiago, and if any of them were raised and docked at Santiago for temporary repairs the company was to be reimbursed at actual cost. If, however, any were raised and delivered to the government, the company was to receive additional compensation. In the case of the Maria Teresa delivery to the government had not been made and undoubtedly every effort would, of course, be made to save her.

TO OVERTHROW CIVIL POWER.

Plot to be Carried Out in Case of a Decision for Dreyfus.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The Daily Chronicle this morning says: "We have received information from a reliable quarter of a well organized plot in Paris, in the event of the impending decision of the court of cassation proving favorable to Dreyfus, to foment a riotous outburst in the French capital, to attempt to overthrow the civil power and to assassinate the leading champions of Dreyfus. These reports are confirmed by interviews had with M. Trarioux, former minister of justice, and M. de Pressense, foreign editor of the Temps, and others. The police have warned those friends of Dreyfus to change their residences temporarily, or at least to carry revolvers."

MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

"Dolce far niente—a sweet doing nothing. I shall pin that to the catalogue of memory pictures painted here."

She looked up at him and laughed. She always laughed. Their eyes met, then parted, and a vague sense of anticipated loss came to him with the realization of her near departure.

The mystic beauty of the twinkle hushed them into unwonted silence, and the tinkle of the sheep and cow bells rhymed into reminiscent memories, thoughts of other days, when they had watched the sun fade away in the west. The fields, whose greenness was accentuated by lines of red Virginia soil, guarded by deeper green fir trees silhouetted, tall and sentinellike, in the far background, seemed to be softly waiting for the coming night.

"You will forget all this. As for me, I will only be one more in your collection," he smiled, evidently a willing victim.

"Collection—of sticks!" she interrogated laughingly.

"You are unkind," he protested.

"You think then my remembrance of a very charming winter, like pricked bubbles, will vanish into space?"

Her face flushed, and a shadow deepened her brown eyes. He was looking intently at a number of holes punched in the sand with her parasol. She caught her breath as she crushed the laces of her gown against her side—a characteristic gesture—then she went on: "We've seen each other every day, if only for a few moments, during nearly two months, meeting with perfect frankness and, I thought, friendship. If it has all been insincere, I shall forget." "Insincere?" He leaned nearer, saying softly: "You have made me care too much, but in the north there will be other interests in your life, crowding me out, until I shall fade into the dim corridors of the past."

She noted the square, strong chin and mouth and the little wrinkles that caught around the smiling eyes. He could thus lightly toss aside the recollection of drives, of wheeling down shaded country roads, which were, he had said, "like a benediction," and the evenings when he sang with delicate insinuation and emphasis about "you, dear," and "love." All these thoughts pricked her mind. If she could only forget him!

She rose.

"Really, you seem most insistent to become merely a polka dot in my memory. Don't you think, even then, I could always spot you?"

Her companion groaned.

"Just if you must, but stay, ah, stay, fair lady, on this perfect day! I promise to do anything, say anything, if you will not go."

"You waxed quite poetical," sweetly. "There is the silver moon for the second verse."

"Thanks for the suggestion," rather stiffly.

"Come. My hostess will think I am lost."

"When a woman will, she will."

He reluctantly followed. They walked home through the spicy, fragrant pines, whose melancholy soughing filled them both with an undefined sadness.

"This must be goodby. I leave on the early train tomorrow and never see people at the station. It makes me blue."

She stood on the steps with one hand extended. The stars flashed brightly, and the faint moon cast a soft light over her. Looking up at the little rebellious curls blown about under the wide, black hat, he felt an irresistible desire to touch them, but only raised her hand to his lips.

"Auf wiedersehn. You have given me many happy days, and I shall always think of you in this lavender gown, the violets and those saucy, nodding feathers—just as you stand. You will surely come back—to us?"

"Perhaps."

Being a woman, she could not cry to him, but must stifle the pain and defy the might-have-been as she saw this man drifting out of her life. One's heart does not break in these modern days.

Smiling bravely, she went wearily up the steps, then paused. Taking a few of the violets, she kissed them and, turning, called to him. He came back.

Somewhat confused, she pinned them on his coat.

"They really belong to you," she explained.

The moon was hidden, and he could not see how pale she had grown. Going to her room, she took down a photograph, softly whispering, "To have loved and lost!" Both hands suddenly pressed against her heart, and the tears blindly fell unheeded as she sobbed on.

He, too, went to his room to ponder. He knew he would miss her. She had been so jolly, always ready for a dance or a ride, knowing his favorite music and songs. Now that was all over. Rummaging through his desk, he finally found a little package of notes. Leaning back in the deep chair, he carefully removed the elastic around them and leisurely read over the lines. Out from the sheets of one fluttered a withered violet. It fell unnoticed to the floor. In another he found a tiny spray of jasmine. She had worn a great bunch of it one night. This spray he had begged for and had been denied until the next morning, when his request was granted with a few patient words. They had been at the opera, and under the magic of the music he looked into her eyes, startled by their deep intensity. He could see them now. How really dear she was! Ah, well, she would come again.

He replaced the notes, struck a match, carefully held it to a cigar and unfolded the evening paper.—St. Louis Star.

COLOR PHOTOGRAPHY.

Although color photography was until quite lately regarded as a far distant, if not unattainable, goal, there are now several claimants to the honor of discovering the method of its achievement, and it is natural and appropriate that the latest to come forward should claim to have outdistanced all his rivals in the perfection of his discovery. This is Dr. Selle, a German scientist, whose process of "photography and photo-printing in nature's colors" is about to be introduced as a commercial enterprise by the floating of a public company. It is claimed for Dr. Selle's process that it is far ahead of all others, by virtue of the fact that it makes it possible for the natural colors to be reproduced on paper, whereas all other attempts have so far stopped short at transparencies.

How is it done? Naturally, a full explanation would bristle with technicalities familiar only to the expert, but a general idea may be conveyed of the manner in which the new process is worked. It is a "three-color" process; that is to say, it works along lines which, up to a certain point, are familiar enough to all workers in this particular field. Three negatives are taken through light filters—one for each of the three primary colors—viz., yellow, red and blue.

A combination of these three negatives gives the perfect picture in the original colors. One inventor at least, has got so far as to produce transparencies in natural colors; but Dr. Selle claims to have gone beyond, and this, briefly put, is the way he accomplishes his purpose: To produce a photograph direct from the original plates a print of the yellow negative is first taken on specially sensitized paper, and after this has been immersed in a suitable bath and duly dried a prepared film is superimposed and the process is consecutively repeated with the red and blue negatives, the final result giving the complete photograph in its original colors. This, of course, is not a transparency, though Dr. Selle's process lends itself with equal readiness to this class of work.

But the great commercial value of Dr. Selle's process lies in the claim that it makes it possible rapidly to reproduce natural colors by the ordinary printing process. In this connection a distinction has to be drawn between a photograph in the ordinary sense, which is produced directly from the actual negatives, and a print obtained from a block on a machine.

In the case of the print an intermediate process is involved, though it is claimed that the reproduction of the natural colors is none the less perfect or automatic on that account. In this case the printing medium is a gelatine block, combining successive impressions from the three negatives. The block is finally placed on a printing machine, which has been specially constructed so as to insure perfect "registering."

Three successive printings, using respectively yellow, red and green ink, are required, with proper intervals between each, and the result is the perfect picture. By this process it is said to be possible to turn out five hundred pictures daily, and this number can be proportionately increased by using more than one machine. The cost of this method of reproducing natural colors is stated to be very small. —[London Chronicle.

SOCIETY NOTES.

The news of the death of Mr. William Cruger Pell, which occurred at Stuttgart, Germany, last week, was a shock to his relatives and friends. Mr. Pell was a member of the old New York family of the name. He was born in 1830, and until a few years ago lived in the Pell homestead on the Hudson, near West Point. About ten years ago he went abroad to reside. Mrs. Pell and two daughters survive him.

Mrs. Oliver Harriman, who went abroad last summer for her health, has returned quite well, and is once more established at her New York house. Her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, will be with her this winter. Mrs. Richard Hunt, Mrs. Harriman's sister, is still seriously ill with nervous prostration. Brought about by her untiring efforts in aid of ill soldiers at Camp Black.

One of the events of special interest this week is the meeting at the farm of William C. Whitney, at Westbury, Long Island, of the Meadowbrook Steeplechase Association. Clarence H. Mackay will present the silver cup to the winning team of the first race. Then will come an open steeplechase for a ladies' cup, a steeplechase for the Meadowbrook Cup, a past entry, and a hunters' flat race.

Recent news from abroad as to the health of Miss de Garmendia is discouraging. She is with her mother, Mrs. Carlos G. de Garmendia, and other members of the family at Nymphenburg, having left Sorrento. Miss de Garmendia, who is an exceptionally pretty and attractive girl, is a sister of Mrs. Julien Townsend Davies and of the late Martin de Garmendia. Mr. and Mrs. Spalding de Garmendia, nee Jenness, who were married early in September, are still traveling abroad, but will make their future home in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. George Crocker, who have been at San Francisco since their return from Europe, are expected in New York this week. They will travel in their own private car. Mr. Crocker's fortune will be much greater than anticipated, according to recent accounts. Mr. and Mrs. Crocker have a new up town house, of which they will take possession on their arrival. Mrs. Crocker has a daughter, Miss Rutherford, who may be one of the season's debutantes.

THREE-QUARTERS OF A MILLION FOR YACHTING INTERESTS.

It is indeed questionable if an outlay was ever made in sports equal to that which will be expended by Commodore J. Pierpont Morgan this year. In the first place he leads off with $300,000 to build, run and sustain the new and the old defenders. Then he has given $148,000 in the shape of a gift of lot of land to the New York Yacht Club for its new club house; add to this nearly $200,000 for his new steam yacht, and the amount equals $645,000, on which there is not a cent of interest drawing, but an outlay all the while. At 3 per cent interest about $20,000 would be the income on this amount, so that, as a speculation, Commodore Morgan also loses this. Add to this thousands of dollars which he will give in prizes the coming year, and it will make a grand total of three-quarters of a million of dollars invested for the yachting interest of the New York Yacht Club.—[Boston Herald.

RELIGION OR THE DEVIL?

Rev. Mr. Mead Discusses That Alternative in Politics.

At the First Presbyterian Church Sunday evening the pastor, Rev. George Whitefield Mead, preached on the subject, "Religion or the Devil in Politics—Which?" His text was Revelation XI:15, "And the seventh angel sounded, and there were great voices in Heaven, saying, 'The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ; and they shall reign forever and ever.'" Mr. Mead said in part:

"In the very morning of the world's history we feel the great sweep of the purposes of God, that they have to do with men collectively and in their social relationships. The religion of the Bible speaks of nations and of kingdoms. There is a national coloring to all the prophecies. Jesus taught us to pray: 'Thy kingdom come on earth.'

It is easy to see why the religion of the Bible places emphasis on civic duty. The little word "society" is one that binds all of us into a bundle together, and through it is a common nerve, by which one part feels the pleasure or the pain of all the other parts. Therefore everything pertaining to society, either by direct or indirect operation—laws, officers, the conduct of officers and of individuals—either elevates society or degrades society, and thus directly affects individual, family and national life, and is a thing with which the religion of the Bible has to do. And since politics is the "science of government, or the management of a political party which has in view the advancement of men to government offices," the religion of the Bible has also to do with politics.

"It is a well-known law that what is of-fect today becomes cause tomorrow. Like a malignant disease, evil multiplies; its poison fast spreads and works through the whole body politic. If unchecked, disintegration and dissolution are sure to follow. Evil, then, in municipal and political life cannot be ignored. Evil can never be ignored. Ignore the adventurer today, and tomorrow a city's credit will be impaired by the villainy of a Tweed. Ignore the anarchist today, and tomorrow he will strike out the life of the chief executive of a nation, or with a bomb will shatter your country's strongest citidels. Today ignore the politics of our city, and tomorrow the waves of immorality and intemperance, which already are beating at the doors of our homes, will deepen their currents and engulf our children, and the hopes of family and of our national life.

I expect to say some plain things tonight. A time like this is not a time to poetize or to speak in vague generalities. What are the conditions in our city? Nature has been generous to her in gifts of climate and grandeur of scenery. It is one of the few unexampled garden spots of the world. But socially, and ethically in its political life, the town seems to be suffering a moral decrepitude that has made possible our present disgrace and "shame in high places," until one office, at least, has become a by-word and a reproach.

It is not my purpose to make any rehearsal of the reputed wrongs of our administrative system; they are too notorious. The multiplied saloons of our town bespeak enough. But our present complaint is not of the saloon men who are conducting their business in conformity to the law, nor is our complaint of those who violate the Sunday-closing ordinance, as we are morally certain many of them do. Our complaint always must be of those officials, or of that official, who allow ignoring and breaking of the law, and whose business it is to enforce the law. Not to know of the open violations which make ours almost a "wide-open" city shows an incompetency that is not deserving of trust, as countenancing violation of the law shows indifference to oath and order which is treason to public trust; and with such an official there is no longer assured safety to industry, to individual or the family, for thus public interests are betrayed instead of protected; crime is fostered and not checked. Nor can the public trust a man who sits in judgment upon existing laws, and makes discretion as to which ones he will enforce and which ones he will not. An executive officer has no right to say what laws shall be enforced or what laws shall not. That is none of his business! The sole duty of an executive in matters of civil code is to enforce the laws which he finds upon the statute books.

Some one may ask me, "How do you know there is ever anything wrong in any part of our city, or that our town is not a veritable little Eden in every part?" But such questioning is a pure quibbling of words. We are painfully conscious of our disgrace; we know to a moral certainty that our town, which otherwise would be the fairest of the fair, has vortices of temptations that threaten the life of our youth, and examples of wantonness that are pernicious in the extreme.

But what is the remedy for all this? First, we must realize that our mission is to society; must aim to apply practically the teaching of the Bible, that the Religion of Jesus has to do with the kingdoms of this earth, and that they are the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ; that it is one's duty as a citizen and a Christian to go to the primaries, and that it is a holy and religious service to accept the franchise of office.

Then let us agitate these matters, and awaken, if possible, the social conscience. I believe it true that by far the greater proportion of our citizens love, and long for, that administration of civic affairs which will ensure the security of business, safety of person and the well-being of home; desire that which will mean municipal and national righteousness and prosperity—and righteousness and prosperity ever go hand in hand. The moral conviction of our community needs only to be aroused into action, and some recent events show that such action is not an iridescent dream. What was accomplished in Brooklyn in 1893, and in New York city in 1894, can be accomplished here. Where there is an organization known to be false to both the great political parties, and to exist for its own and not the community's good, it ought to be easy to overpower it, and to bury it as the old Scotchwoman said she would bury the Devil, face downward, that the more he scratched the deeper down he would go, and never be able to get up again.

The public is always to be trusted and to be relied on. They have only to be acquainted with the facts. This is our hope; our belief in men. Lincoln once said: "It is possible to fool all men sometimes, and some men all the time, but never possible to fool all men all the time." Therefore, agitate; bring facts to light, and let us guard against the easy danger, that the disagreeableness of the task turn us from our duty of working for civic righteousness, and that other danger, that the commonness of wrongs wears off the edge of moral sensitiveness.

Another necessity is persistent, untiring effort. Only so can we gain the victory which will secure the prosperity and purity of our city, and maintain her honor and dignity, as one of the most favored cities of the New World; and only in such a victory can the church accomplish her allotted work; turn the great strength of the church now spent in overcoming the resistant forces of unrighteousness into positive spiritual effort, which shall be to the speedy and sure result of making the kingdoms of this world, its political, its commercial and its industrial life—its all—the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ.

TEA-GOWN.

For a simple tea-gown there is nothing more servicenble than a woolen fabric, and there are many weaves suited to this purpose. Nun's veiling, albatross, cashmere and drap d'été are some of the fabrics to be had in bright tones. The one illustrated is of rose pink cashmere, with a yoke of cream point de gene. A flounce of lace to match forms a ruffle at the bottom of the yoke, and ends in jabot effect on either side of a loose front of fine-plaited, white liberty silk. The yoke of lace is embellished with chenille to match the gown, which accentuates the pattern.

Any use which can be made of chenille is sure to be correct, as it appears in some form in every department of dress. Cloths are dotted all over with chenille, matching the color. Various transparent materials for bodices, vests and yokes are dotted with it. Lace designs are outlined with it, and silks are embroidered with chenille combined with silk cord. These silks—which, by the way, are used for bodices and vests—are one of the season's prettiest novelties. They are taffetas in black, white and the prettiest pale colors, well covered with a scroll or bowknot design done in black chenille, followed closely with a white silk cord. Waists are also made of it, but will not be common, owing to the cost.

THE BEAUTIFUL GEYSER FIELDS OF ICELAND.

Barren as Iceland really is, the artist's eye would revel in the beautiful effects on the snowy jokulls, the twilight softening shades of mauve, greens and grays on the distant lava peaks, and the luminous midnight sky. The intensity of the blue water of lake or ocean is superb, and the mighty waterfalls are grand. And the geyser fields! All the warm tints, from cream to russet, are found in the mineral deposit around the basin of the Great Geyser. Little Geyser, Strokkr (the Churn), and the Little Strokkr, while Blesi (the Blue One) is lined with exquisite white, like porcelain, making it a fitting vessel for the cooking of food, and for furnishing boiling water for our tea and coffee. It was so smooth and beautiful that I seemed to be mutilating something rare when I chipped off pieces of its lining, but I knew they would be valuable souvenirs, and the uneasy, bubbling water would soon amend the deficiency.

The mud pools on this plain are the most dangerous, for they spout hot mud diagonally out of the earth. Coming upon them in one direction they are not seen, and many a visitor has gone home with a scalded foot. The hydraulic display is now very fitful, and inconsiderate tourists have injured the spouting fountains by loading stones into them to see them cast out, so you must take your tent with you, and encamp on the plain to await the pleasure of their majesties. Blesi will serve you well while waiting. The Great Geyser had not spouted for a week when we were there, and such surliness indicated a near activity. The water spouted unusually high when it finally appeared—one hundred and fifty feet—and showed all the hues of the rainbow, majestic at the same time and mysterious. It played for fifteen minutes, and then its beautiful cascades subsided in a feathery mist, a refined and graceful withdrawal.—[Writer in The International.

Rear Admiral G. E. Belknap, retired, has been notified that the board to relocate coaling depots, of which he is the senior member, is dissolved.

THE RED CROSS.

St. George, I learned to love thee in my youth
When of thy deeds I read in deathless song;
And now, when I behold the dragon Wrong
Hard by the castle gates of Love and Truth,
I feel the world's great need of thee, forsooth,
To strike the heavy blow delayed too long.
Then, turning from the mediæval throng,
Where thou wert bravest, yet the first in ruth,
I watch thy votaries by land and sea,
Armed with thy sacred sign, go forth to fight
Anew the battles of humanity
Beneath the flag of mercy and of right;
No holier band a holier realm e'er trod
Than this—the world's knight-errantry of God!

—[Charles Hamilton Musgrove, in Harper's Weekly.

THE HERO CROP.

There's nothing like the harvest that the Yankee soil will yield,
And how the world-folk wonder when its largeness stands revealed;
Such a crop of dauntless heroes when the right times are fulfilled,
It can spring from nothing less than blood of noble heroes spilled.

It needs the soil of freedom for the perfecting of might,
And the growth of lofty principles, stern truth and swerveless right;
And these with steadfast purpose and a courage without fear
(The world well knows the markings) make the hero's martial gear.

There's a brand new set of heroes with a brand-new set of names,
And they're shooting up in lushness, on Liberty's broad plains.
Oh, they hadn't even started just a few short weeks ago,
But they've made the nations marvel just to see them sprout and grow.

There is Dewey at Manila—who can match his bold attack?
Who can match the deed of Hobson, hero of the Merrimac?
Schley and Sampson, they are getting giant foliage on top—
Tell me, oh, ye powers, can ye show a like grand hero crop?

....The appointment of Prince George of Greece as head of the new administration in Crete is imminent. His title will be commissioner general of the European powers in Crete. The prince is expected to arrive at Canea and assume his duties about the middle of November.

....Rev. John Henry Barrows of Chicago has been offered the presidency of Oberlin College, but has not yet decided whether to accept. Dr. Barrows is one of the leading Presbyterian clergymen in the West. He was prominent in the World's Parliament of Religions.

....Rev. Heman Lincoln Wayland, D. D., one of the best known clergymen in the Baptist denomination, died at Wernersville, Penn., yesterday, in his sixty-ninth year. He was born in Providence, his father being Francis Wayland, the eminent president of Brown University and authority on moral science. His brother, Professor Francis Wayland, Jr., has been for many years Dean of the Yale law school. Dr. Wayland graduated from Brown University in 1850, and had been a member of the board of trustees of that college since 1888.

....David A. Wells, widely known as a writer on economics, died at his home in Norwich, Conn., Saturday, in his seventieth year. He was a lineal descendant on his father's side of Thomas Welles, governor of the colony of Connecticut from 1655 to 1658, and on his mother's side of David Ames, who during the administration of George Washington built and established the national armory at Springfield.

....Mme. Eva Nansen has given up singing in public since her husband's return from Arctic regions, but continues to charm her friends by her sympathetic voice. Edward Grieg is an enthusiastic admirer of Mrs. Nansen's voice, and her favorite songs were composed by him. The distinguished Norwegian composer is now living near Bergen. He has recently produced two new works—one a song and the other a symphonic dance.

....Mrs. Leslie Carter, the actress, under the name of Caroline D. Carter, filed a petition in bankruptcy in New York yesterday, showing liabilities of $63,773 and no assets except wearing apparel valued at $200. ....Henry B. Hyde, president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York, is dangerously ill, suffering from heart disease in an aggravated form, and little hope of his recovery is held out. Mr. Hyde is famous as the man who receives a salary of $100,000 a year, the largest paid to any business man in the United States. In spite of this and of his prominence in the business world he is personally known to few persons in New York, and has made it his boast that he can walk along Broadway and not be recognized.

MOODY AT CARDS.

One evening in San Francisco Evangelist Moody sat in his room at the hotel playing a game of cards with Mrs. Moody and two friends, when a messenger came in with a despatch. As the boy stood waiting for a reply Mr. Moody suddenly asked: "Won't you sit down, my lad, and have a game of 'authors' with us?" The boy declined and soon left the room. Hardly had the door closed when Mrs. Moody said: "Why, Dwight, what made you think of inviting that boy to sit down and play with us?" "My dear," replied Moody, "don't you see, if I had not called the boy's attention to the fact that we were playing 'authors,' all the morning papers would certainly have announced under big headlines that D. L. Moody had been discovered in a San Francisco hotel engaged in a game of cards?"—[Ladies' Home Journal.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

The CLOTHING BUSINESS is much overdone in this city—you can easily see that. I am determined to get out of it. There is no money in it. To accomplish this I know I must lose money on my stock. On the newer portion of the stock we will sell at cost and less while the older and less desirable portion and all broken lots and sizes will go for what they will bring. Rather than sell at auction we will sell at auction prices. If we can fit you the price will not stand in the way. You know me well enough—having sold clothing in this city during the past 25 years—to believe what I say. And I say this is a genuine closing out sale. The goods I shall sell are not a lot of cheap, shoddy stuff bought for the sale. It is from my own stock of clean, reliable clothing. For Weak Stomachs disabled and broken down by disease, We can most emphatically endorse Vinol. Vinol acts favorably upon the digestive organs, enabling them to obtain proper nourishment from food, while at the same time it is accomplishing its mission as a tonic reconstructor.

is a delicate, mild table wine, in which has been dissolved the active medicinal principles that abound in the cod's liver, separated from the oil, whose disagreeable taste and smell has always been so closely associated with any remedy of this nature.

Vinol is positively delicious to take.

SPAIN'S ALLIES.

The Spanish government looks in vain for help from the European nations. Not one of them ventures to interpose, by word or deed, to save the falling fortunes of the once proud and mighty Castilians. And so events are left to take their course.

But we have at home, according to the Washington Star, some especial friends, if not allies, of Spain. The Star points out that when it was first proposed to interfere in the matter of Cuba these took the ground that the United States could not afford such a step. They asserted that as we were getting along very well we should be content with that. When asked if the United States did not owe something to humanity, they could not see it. When asked about the starvation and death in Cuba, they denied the existing condition of things, and quoted from Senor de Lome and his paid slanderers to support themselves. They were not moved to resentment by the destruction of the Maine. They were entirely willing to submit that to arbitration, and even, in Spain's interests, attempted to discredit the findings of the naval board of inquiry, which declared that the ship and her crew were the victims of treachery. In a word, these men were willing, and even urging, that the government should occupy a position of the most degrading pusillanimity, rather than that a blow should be struck for freedom in Cuba and self-respect in the United States.

But the country at large took a different view of the situation. The spirit of the country demanded action. The situation in Cuba was too well known. The facts had come from sources altogether above question. Senor de Lome and his Mercy could not hide the truth. Thousands had died and were dying in Cuba as the result of Spanish policy. The report of the naval board of inquiry was approved. The country believed that the Maine and her crew had gone down to the bottom as the result of Spanish treachery. And so, after Senor de Lome had been sent home for trickery and slander, and Spain had refused to get out of Cuba, the United States proceeded to put her out by force.

And now that the war is over, and victory has crowned our arms, the men who opposed the war come forward, logically enough, and propose to undo, as far as possible, all the results of it of benefit to the United States. Again they contend that the United States has no business outside of its former boundaries. "It is prosperous now. Let well enough alone. When asked if there is no responsibility to civilization in the matter of what has already been done, they reply with a smile. They can see none. When asked what shall be done with the captured islands, they fall off into generalities of selfishness and timidity. Still the dominant note is that the United States is unequal to any new task, and can hope to preserve itself only by sticking to the mainland. They dare not admit it, but they would be willing to see all of Spain's lost possessions restored to her, with a most humble apology for all the work of the American army and navy."

This is a pretty severe arraignment, but it is true. There is no gainsaying the disloyalty couched in many of the criticisms of Mr. McKinley and his outlined plans. But with it all the critics do not pretend to say what ought to be done. They are simply destructives.

THE WASHINGTON EXPLOSION.

The first reports concerning the explosion and damage in the Supreme Court room at Washington were, as such rumors usually are, considerably exaggerated. Still, it proves a serious affair, but scarcely of a nature where the damage is irremediable.

Word now comes that an examination of the courtroom shows that the injury has been confined chiefly to walls, ceilings and carpets. It is not true that the building itself is seriously injured, or that the beauty of the magnificent structure is at all lessened. The damage was done chiefly by water and smoke and can be easily repaired.

It is not yet absolutely certain what caused the explosion, though it is popularly believed that the gas meter was the destructive agent. Now that much of the debris has been cleared away, the true condition of affairs is being revealed. Mr. Wood, the assistant architect, has made a preliminary examination, and declares that he is not yet ready to say what caused the explosion, although the main attention is being given to the gas supply. "I find that the general damage sustained by the building is not so serious as supposed. The heavy foundations to the building do not appear to have been disturbed, and the walls which were blown down were merely the thin encircling walls built to cover the steam pipes, etc. None of the heavy sustaining arches or pillars have given away, so far as I have ascertained. For the present it does not seem that a re-building of any part of the Capitol is likely to be necessary. The repairing, I hope, we can finish before the time Congress assembles."

This is certainly good news for the whole country. The only damage that cannot be made good is said to be in the file room of the Supreme Court in the basement, where were stored the official records and the original copies of opinions delivered by the court, from the foundation of the government. But this is not so severe a loss, practically, as might at first be supposed, for all these opinions have been printed officially, and their value as law documents will not be diminished by this accident. It was more in the nature of mementoes or bric-a-brac that the original papers were prized.

THE TERRAPIN SEASON.

One of our Southern exchanges has this to say in relation to the popular terrapin, that is now the fad of gormandizers and lovers of good living generally:

"The terrapin season has just opened in Maryland, and Baltimore will soon be alive with these testudineous quadrupeds, which will be sold by thousands to the epicurean class that can afford to eat them. The terrapin—that is, the "real thing," or diamond-back fellow—is today the millionaire's dish, and only the wealthy can afford to enjoy his meat.

"Years ago the negro slaves of Maryland raised their voices in loud complaint because their masters insisted upon serving them diamond-back terrapin, instead of pork. These unfortunates did not know a good thing when they saw it, and now not one in fifty would have the means to satisfy his appetite with the diet against which he once protested.

"In recent years terrapin have been very hard to procure, and it is said that they are fast dying out. The best 'birds' are obtained in Chesapeake bay, though thousands are raised in pounds and carefully nurtured. A real Chesapeake bay terrapin, by which is meant the diamond-back aristocrat, commands on the market a figure of which he might be proud. Specimens only six inches long are sold at $36 a dozen, while the eight-inch counts,' as they are pompously called, bring $60 a dozen.

"We should be much gratified if the epicurean appetite could be whetted to the point of buying Virginia's liberal stock of 'mud turkles,' which bask on the sun-warmed banks of the old canal and fritter away their idle summer hours in aimless, useless slothfulness."

POLITICAL PARSONS.

Zion's Herald says very truly: "While we are not able to adopt the views of Rev. R. E. Bisbee of Chicopee, the Democratic nominee for Congress in his district, we cannot fail to commend the noble and catholic spirit which he is showing in the political speeches which he is making. Could anything be finer than this paragraph with which he closed a recent address? 'Friends and Fellow-citizens: Every election is a momentous occasion. It is the voter's one chance to express himself. When you go to the polls, go not in anger, not in revenge, but go to express an honest conviction, acting up to all the light you have, rebuking evil, promoting the good, and hopeful of the future. Do this, and the republic will be safe.'"

An increase in yellow fever is reported at Havana, and it becomes a very serious matter to land an army of volunteers, on our part, to take possession of that city within a few weeks, as is proposed. The disease is spreading, and as the place is yet under Spanish domination, no sanitary steps are likely to be taken for its control. No American soldiers should be sent to that pest-hole under present conditions.

If the reported discoveries and inventions of Tesla the electrician can be relied upon, the first thing for Congress to do on its assembling will be to call off all appropriations for building more warships. The story as told is almost too wonderful to be credited, but in these days it is not safe to deny anything of that nature in advance. We shall await further information on the subject with interest.

All women attending the Opera House are requested by the company performing this week, as they have been many times before, to dispense with big hats. No gentleman, if he were appealed to so frequently, and with the assurance that he was disobliging his associates, would refuse to accept the invitation to remove his headgear. Why should a woman be less polite than a man?

It was rumored this morning that Spanish cruiser Maria Teresa d'd not go down at all, but continued to float until cast upon a neighboring island. We doubt very much the correctness of this story, because in the light of history every Spanish warship seems to have been built to go to the bottom.

Ex-President E. Benjamin Andrews, now superintendent of schools in Chicago, has at last won a victory over the school board. After a month's controversy that bellicose body has decided to accept the situation and permit him to make nominations of teachers.

It is pretty generally admitted that Boss Croker has injured his candidates by making too many speeches, and that Boss Platt has helped his side by remaining silent.

Germany continues to complain because we are so harsh with the Spaniards. There is not a little selfishness lying at the bottom of this estimate of the relations between the two countries.

The Cubans are a queer lot. Before the surrender of Santiago they were content to work for $1 a week and be furnished with a single meal a day. Now they are striking for $2 a day and mince pie and sweetmeats.

In New York, Boston and numerous other cities the liquor saloons are closed on election days. It is not so in Newport. Here they are never closed.

THE MAGAZINES.

The frontispiece of the New England Magazine for November is a reproduction of a rare portrait of George Dewey, the hero of Manila, made in 1867, appearing in connection with an article on Montpelier, Vt.—Dewey's birthplace and home—by Hiram A. Huse, a prominent lawyer of Montpelier. Rev. Henry F. Bond contributes an account of Old Summer street, as it was in the days when many prominent Bostonians had residences there, and another interesting article in the line of antiquarian research is that on "Revolutionary Records of a Country Town," by Mary Hall Leonard; the old town referred to is Rochester, Mass., and the records consulted relate chiefly to the acts and resolves of the Rochester town meeting. Miss Alice D'Alche contributes an important account of "Old Wentworth House and Its Masters." "The Man with the Branded Hand," whom Whittier has immortalized in verse, is the subject of a brief sketch by Frank Edward Kittredge. "Hunting in the Maine Woods," by Mr. Sid H. Nealy, is an enthusiastic account of a moose hunt in the Maine wilderness, and several fine drawings by the author picture incidents of Maine sporting life. There is the usual amount of good fiction —a story by Imogen Clark, entitled "A Woman and Her Son;" "Miss Peters's Indian Summer," by Mrs. M. E. Pratt, and a short sketch entitled "The Peacemaker of Lamont," by Gulielma Zollinger. "The Editor's Table" discusses the remarkable advance of co-operative production in England, which is hailed as the most promising thing now to be seen in the industrial world.

The November Forum has three very excellent articles on the recent war with Spain. Hon. Charles Denby, late United States minister to China, gives a concise answer in the affirmative to the question, "Shall We Keep the Philippines?"; in "The Moral of the Cuban War" Goldwin Smith takes, as he himself terms it, the "unfashionable" view of the war; and he asks: "What is this mood styled 'Imperialism,' 'Jingoism,' 'Expansionism,' 'Greater Britain,' which has, suddenly come over the world?" Fred T. Jane, the English naval expert, writes on the "Naval Lessons of the War." The respective merits of the Nicaragua canal and the new Panama canal are ably discussed, the former being championed by Warner Miller and the latter by General H. L. Abbot. There are also two articles on topics of considerable interest to citizens of the United States—one by Sidney Low, late editor of the St. James's Gazette, on "The Change in English Sentiment Toward the United States"; and the other on "Germany and Great Britain," by His Excellency Albert von Schäffle, formerly Austrian minister of commerce. The literary article is by Professor Benjamin W. Wells of the University of the South, on "Hermann Sudermann." Other articles are: "Some Weak Places in Our Pension System," a scathing exposé by Major S. N. Clark, and "Does College Education Pay?"—which is affirmatively answered by Professor John Carleton Jones of the University of Missouri, who challenges Grant Allen's deprecatory remarks on university training.

"Mr. Kipling as a Moralist" in the November Critic is the forerunner of "Mr. Kipling as an Artist" in the December number. Other special articles in November are "Literary Palaces," by Gerald Stanley Lee; "Paul L. Ford at Home," by Lindsay Swift; "The Suns of Gascony," by Theodore Stanton; "A Veteran Shakespeare Scholar" (Dr. W. J. Rolfe), and "The Sculptor of Pan" (G. G. Barnard). Among the portraits are Richard Mansfield (frontispiece), Paul L. Ford, Joe Jefferson as Rob Acres, John Drew, Dr. Rolfe, Georges Leygues (a son of Gascony, recently re-appointed French minister of public instruction), W. W. Ellsworth (secretary on the American revolution), G. G. Barnard (the sculptor), Captain Chadwick of cruiser New York, Hon. A. A. Adee, (assistant Secretary of State), the late Stéphane Mallarmé and Rudyard Kipling from a pen-and-ink sketch by himself.

The Nickell for November contains good reading matter and is well illustrated. A series of pictures of the best fields and factories of California, with a short but comprehensive account of the best sugar industry, by Ralph E. Bicknell, open the number. There are pictures of many of the leading lights in the football world, with a forecast of the season on the gridiron; four complete short stories, the always interesting theatrical pictures and gossip, wee anecdotes, and other attractive miscellany.

NOT SO BLACK AS THEY'RE PAINTED.

Ministers' sons find a defender in de Candolle, the French scientist and skeptic, who shows that science owes great researches to the sons of the clergy. He builds a strong, solid argument against the celibacy of the clergy on this ground, and says: "In clerical families, their manner of life, their quiet regularity, their residence, largely in the country, their counsels to their children, the absence of various causes of dissipation, the habitual vigilance of the father and his domestic example of study, surpassing the advantages of other families, give all the greater strength and force to the transmission of those faculties which are appropriate to the cultivation of the sciences."

The learned author gives lists of distinguished and eminent scientists and scholars who were the sons of pastors—Agassiz, Berzelius, Boerhaave, Encke, Euler, Linnæus, Olbers, and a host of others. Among historians and philosophers he names Hallam, Hobbes, Emerson, Sismondi and others.

A glance through any biographical dictionary reveals scores—nay hundreds—of children and grandchildren of clerics in every range of literature, science and philosophy. The disposition of sons to follow the callings of their fathers makes divinity conspicuously hereditary in such world-wide-known theological luminaries and pulpiteers as Jonathan Edwards, Archbishop Whately, Robert Hall, Lightfoot, the Wesleys, Lowth, Stillingfleet, the Beechers and Spurgeons—a list that might be multiplied indefinitely, to which every reader will be able to add from his or her personal knowledge.

How many noted poets have been the fruit of clerical matrimony! Young, Cowper, Thomson, Coleridge, Montgomery, Heber, Tennyson, Lowell and many others of note. Look at the clerical contributions to intellectual philosophy in such distinguished sons as Dugald Stewart, Cudworth, Reid, Brown, Boyle, Abercrombie and Bentham.

Literature has been a wide field for ministers' sons to cultivate, as is evidenced by Swift, Lockhart, Macaulay, Sterne, Hazlitt, Thackeray, Bancroft, Emerson, Holmes, Kingsley, Matthew Arnold and a hundred others. To architecture this class contributed Sir Christopher Wren to art, Sir Joshua Reynolds; to heroism, Lord Nelson. The daughters of the clergy may not be overlooked—Mme. Trollope, Mrs. Barbauld, Jane Taylor, Elizabeth Carter, the Brontës, and Mrs. Stowe.

How many sons of ministers have become eminent in civil life!—Henry Clay, Burr, the Everetts, down to Presidents Arthur and Cleveland. We are prepared for Monsieur de Candolle's figures, and for his assertion that "the sons of clerical families have actually surpassed during two hundred years, in their contributions to the roll of eminent scientists, the similar contributions of any other class of families, not excepting those that belong to scientific professions—physicians, surgeons and chemists."

DREYFUS ON HIS PRISON ISLAND.

The editor of Le Petit Courrier of Angers on the Maine, France, publishes an interview with a soldier of the infantry marine, who formed part of a detachment which lately spent several months at the Iles du Grand Salut. This soldier saw the prisoner of the Ile du Diable, and he has furnished concerning him several bits of information. The island, the soldier said, is now completely bare. Dreyfus occupies a hut of wood placed near the centre of the island. The prisoner has allowed his beard to grow, and that and his hair are now perfectly white. He had a bad attack of fever in July, and it left his face and form much emaciated, and he stoops badly when he walks. His guards are not allowed to exchange a single word with him; of late they have been four in number, taken from the infantry marine, and are under the command of a sergeant. They relieve each other every two hours, and guard the prisoner night and day with loaded rifles and revolvers. A guard never leaves him, and the sides of his hut are so furnished with windows that the least movement in the interior is plainly visible from the outside. Every morning a boat, rowed by convicts who know the dangerous passage, arrives at the island bearing one day's provisions for the prisoner. This boat is in charge of two armed marines. For more than a year there has been no cook employed on the island, and the prisoner is obliged to prepare his own food. In his hut there are plenty of books, but newspapers are denied him.

THE NEW CAMP.

Major Bliss Writes from Columbia of the Location.

Home Politics a General Topic Among the Rhode Island Boys.

[Special correspondence of the News.]

WITH THE FIRST REGIMENT RHODE ISLAND VOLUNTEERS, Camp Meade, Middletown, Penn., Nov. 6.—It is a boisterous day in camp. A strong westerly wind is sweeping across the parade ground, carrying practically everything before it. The sombreros scurry away; the tents bulge in and out; the guy ropes, perhaps the only staple, are torn; the worn portions of the canvas cottages are strained to their utmost, and a few tears more are made in the canvas, although it previously was well ventilated. Although the wind is strong it is not bitter, but will undoubtedly become so as night approaches.

We are to have new tents when we arrive at Camp Fornance, Columbia, S. C. The camp is named after Captain Fornance, one of the heroes who lost his life at Santiago. Major Bliss, in a letter to Major Barker, says, among other things, concerning the camp: "I am hardly able to say whether I like the place or not. The camps are to be nearer together than ever, which is very bad. The soil is light and sandy; in digging a sink the first six feet was all sand. It has one advantage; it will dry quickly after a rain. The camp is on high ground, the field is quite level and is fringed with pine trees. The parade ground is being rolled with a steam roller. The city water is in camp. It is quite near to Columbia, which is a sleepy, old-fashioned, one-horse place. Today we have our tents up and floored, put wagon bodies together and carted lumber." In another place he says: "The nights are cool, but not cold."

Every indication is that matters will be so adjusted as to have everything in complete working order by the time the regiment reaches the new camp. When that will be nobody here can at present state authoritatively, although it is generally conceded at headquarters that we are spending our last Sunday at Camp Meade. Other persons, however, contend that the Thanksgiving dinner to be given by Governor Dyer will be eaten here. We trust, however, that the department will, in view of the cold weather and uninhabitable condition of the tents, realize the expediency of the regiment's transfer to a warmer climate and more comfortable quarters in general.

Our brigade organization is again broken up. The battalion of the First Delaware, retained in the service at the time the other two battalions were mustered out, broke camp today and will be mustered out of the service tomorrow. It has not yet been made public what regiment will be assigned in its place.

Rev. Father Costigan, who for several Sundays has been conducting services in the camp of the First Rhode Island, has been presented with a costly chalice by Rt. Rev. Bishop Harkins of Rhode Island. It is to be used at all the Catholic services during the regiment's stay here, and afterward becomes the property of Father Costigan. The presentation of the gift was entrusted to Captain Hackett, who delivered it today while the clergyman was celebrating mass in the field, a large gathering of soldiers being present.

Services are also being now conducted at the Young Men's Christian Association tent, where the attendance is good.

Within the cold tents are gathered the boys in blue, the topic of conversation being generally politics and the issues incident to the campaign now going on in the state. Large lithographs of Congressmen Bull and Capron are posted around the wooden cook tents. Candidate Garvin, in a small picture, is also in evidence. If one were to judge from the arguments and the general drift of the conversation he would be forced to believe, especially in the case of the first-named, that he would poll no small vote in the regiment. His supporters contend that he put forth earnest and honest efforts for the welfare of our command. Of course there are in the regiment men of all shades of political belief; consequently many spirited discussions are enjoyed. The issues of the different candidates and the towns in the respective districts are posted. Major Abbot, the custodian selected to deliver the ballots to the proper officer here and to return them to the state officials, was here Friday with his charge, leaving the same day with ballots for the men arranging the Southern camp. He will probably return from the South Thursday, taking the ballots at Camp Meade on his way North.

Sickness in the regiment is reported neither on the increase nor on the decrease, although the weather is supposed to be favorable to convalescence. Private Gavill is at the Baltimore University Hospital, Baltimore, Md., and J. P. Shaw at the Philadelphia City Hospital, both progressing encouragingly.

FIRE IN THE CLARENCE MACAY HOUSE.

Except for the prompt action of guests, Clarence H. Mackay's beautiful residence in the Wheatley hills, at Hempstead, Long Island, would have been destroyed by fire last night. The flames started in the basement, and were caused, it is believed, by a defective flue.

The house is one of the finest residences on Long Island, and is owned by Perry Tiffany. Mr. Mackay leased it in the spring, immediately after his marriage to Miss Duer. He is a prominent member of the Meadow Brook Hunt Club, and last night had perhaps thirty other members as his guests, intending to give them a dinner.

As the club members were chatting in various parts of the house, a dense volume of smoke poured up from the lower floor and spread through the building. An instant later servants gave warning that the place was on fire. Mr. Mackay, followed by a dozen friends, ran down stairs, but was quickly forced by the smoke to beat a retreat. He tried again, but with no better success.

By this time the roar of the flames was distinctly audible. Realizing that the fire was beyond his control, and that the beautiful house, with its costly furnishings, might be destroyed, Mr. Mackay mounted his horse and rode to the club house and notified the fire department of Westbury and Mineola. In his absence the society men doffed their coats and set to work. Some formed a bucket brigade, while others started to rescue the valuable furniture and bric-a-brac. They were aided greatly by the ladies, who pluckily braved the overpowering smoke to rescue Mr. Mackay's property.

The house is situated on one of the highest points of the Wheatley hills. Fearing that the firemen would be unable to drag the apparatus there, a dozen of the huntsmen mounted their ponies and rode to their assistance. By the time the engines arrived the lower floor of the house was a seething mass of flames.

Aided by the guests, the firemen put two streams on the fire, and confined their efforts to stopping its spread, but in spite of their exertion, the flames extended to the library and sleeping-rooms on the second floor, where they were checked. The fire was still smouldering at an early hour this morning. The damage is estimated at $40,000.

The dinner was to have been preliminary to a steeplechase to be held today on the estate of W. C. Whitney, at Westbury.

FOR GOSPEL WORK IN TRINIDAD.

Those who have been interested in raising a fund for the support of Rev. E. S. Kilpatrick in the mission work which he is about to undertake in Trinidad, West Indies, met last evening and organized under the name of the Society for Gospel Work in Trinidad.

The following officers were elected: Benjamin B. Coggeshall, president; George P. Magner, treasurer; Miss Annie E. Caswell, secretary.

An executive committee was appointed, consisting of the officers and the following members: Daniel Morrison, George Armstrong, D. E. Campbell, Richard Bullock, John R. Caswell, Richard Freeborn, George P. Magner, Miss L. E. French, Mrs. A. C. Stevens, Mrs. J. S. Kimber, Mrs. T. J. Stoddard.

All present regular subscribers to the fund were elected members of the society.

Something over $500 has already been pledged towards the yearly support of the work.

Mr. Kilpatrick, with his family, expects to sail from New York for Trinidad Wednesday, November 23.

JAMESTOWN.

[Regular correspondence of the News.]

At a recent meeting of the town council the following accounts were allowed and ordered paid:

Swinburne, Peckham & Co., $292.27; Swinburne, Peckham & Co., $1.10; Mrs. E. T. Taylor, 25 cents; Watson & Gardner, $6.31; Watson & Gardner, $19.13.

The town clerk was authorized to receive bids for the windmill and tank stored at the town hall, and present them at the next meeting of the council.

A reward of $25 was authorized for evidence that will convict the person or persons who have been breaking and stealing the street lamps.

The town clerk was authorized to receive bids for furnishing the stone necessary to build the wall around the lot formerly occupied by the South schoolhouse. He was also authorized to receive bids for the old fence that formerly enclosed the grounds.

The council as a board of canvassers dropped 4 names from the real estate and 4 from the personal property list. Three names were added to the real estate list and two were dropped from the registry list. Four names were transferred from the registry to the real estate list. The lists as changed were then approved.

Mr. Thomas F. Holl, son of Mr. John E. Holt, died Sunday after an illness of several years. Mr. Holt was in the employ of Mr. A. M. Bailey until ill health forced him to give up steady employment.

R. W. Curry has the contract to enlarge the summer cottage of Miss Elizabeth Clarke on Walcott avenue.

Dr. Kindleberger has returned from New York, where he has engaged apartments for the winter.

Superintendent Kohler received unfavorable news today concerning the condition of his wife, who is dangerously ill in New York.

Miss Annie Barber has returned from a visit to Kingston.

Steamer Connecut is laid up at the West ferry.

Mr. Arthur E. Gardner, son of Mr. Palmer Gardner of Allenton, died Sunday night after a short sickness. Mr. Gardner was janitor of the Jamestown Yacht Club last season. The body will be taken to Narragansett tomorrow, and will be buried at Moresfield. Mr. Gardner was one of the fire department, the members of which have sent a floral pillow. The flag on the engine house is at half-mast, out of respect to Mr. Gardner and Mr. Holt, who was also a member of the department.

But half a dozen people were at the Town Hall when the polls were opened at 10 o'clock this morning. Moderator J. J. Watson, Jr., called the meeting to order, and Clerk Caswell read the call. Less than a dozen votes were cast during the first hour, and the vote will probably be the lightest cast here for years. The indications point to a falling off in the Bull vote, but the amendment will probably carry by a good majority.

Another evidence of the fact that there is work to be done at the old mines at Portsmouth was shown at the freight yard, when a large boiler arrived for the Compressed Coal Company which controls the property. The boiler will be shipped to Portsmouth at once.—[Fall River Herald.

THE VOTE IN THE CITY.

Apparently Little Interest, But a Large Poll Promised.

The election for Congressman and city officers today has proceeded quietly, but with an evident determination to get out a large vote. The weather has been conducive to the polling of a full ballot, and although in the early afternoon the total was considerably less than in the Presidential election in 1896 it was everywhere larger than last year, and the result of the afternoon balloting, when the workingmen come in, will undoubtedly make the total nearly as large as two years ago. There is no special interest in the Congressional and mayoralty elections, and the ward contests are not making much stir except in the Fourth, where there is an old-time struggle between the representatives of the two parties, with the result somewhat in doubt, the chances favoring the election of at least one Republican candidate for the common council. The school committee and state constitution are not creating any special interest.

In the First ward everybody complained of the slowness of the voting, though it was ahead of that of last year for the time. There were few about the polls, and the Democrats seemed to be dissatisfied with the way their campaign was being run and made preparations to do more active work.

In the Second ward the voters went along in rapid succession during the morning, and the vote was larger than a year ago but considerably smaller than in the Presidential election in 1896. The supporters of William E. Mumford, the Democratic nominee for third councilman, were making a strong fight against David Stevens, the Republican candidate, and it was reported that they were getting the colored vote in return for a promise of votes for Rev. Elijah Richardson for the school committee. There is considerable opposition to William Shepley, the only candidate for alderman, and many voters were writing in the name of Edward P. Marsh for alderman.

In the Third ward at the opening the voters were called upon to elect a warden pro tem., to serve during the day, in the absence of Major Herbert Bliss, the regular official. There were fifteen voters present when Clerk Tilley read the call and asked for nominations for warden. Frank G. Scott was nominated and elected without opposition. The polls were then opened and balloting commenced, with a little delay caused by one of the supervisors giving registry ballots to a half dozen taxpaying voters, who did not discover the mistake until they had marked their candidates for mayor and other general officers, and looked in vain for candidates for alderman and councilmen. The mistake was soon rectified, and the balloting proceeded. The vote came in steadily during the morning, and was considerably ahead of last year's poll, but, like that in the Second ward, was still behind that of two years ago. The contest for alderman and councilmen did not seem to be creating much stir.

In the Fourth ward also a clerk had to be elected before any voting was done, and Cornelius J. Riley, the candidate for clerk on the ticket, was chosen. There was an abundance of workers and a good-sized vote was being very quietly polled. The workers all said they were perfectly satisfied with the way the voters were coming in. There is a big laboring men's vote in this and the Fifth wards, and as nearly all were at work a large vote was expected in both after 4 o'clock.

In the Fifth things were slower than anywhere else in the city, due it was said to the workingmen being busy. A big rush was expected after 4. This is the only ward where the vote was not equal, or ahead of that of last year, and there appeared to be less work going on than at the Third and Fourth.

The way the ballots dropped into the various boxes is shown below:

Hour.	—WARDS.— 1	2	3	4	5	Total
7:30	50	75	40	25	40	230
12	180	345	296	280	187	1,288
1	214	400	350	300	272	1,536
2	300	487	419	310	302	1,830

The total votes for mayor at recent elections were as follows:

October 24, 1894—John Waters, 1,793; John P. Sanborn, 1,767; majority for Waters, 26.

May 24, 1895, Special—P. J. Boyle, 1,747; J. P. Sanborn, 1,340; F. M. Hammett, 482; plurality for Boyle, 371.

October 28, 1895—P. J. Boyle, 1,799; William Hamilton, 1,455; majority for Boyle, 344.

November, 1896—P. J. Boyle, 2,092; A. McLeod, 1,803; majority for Boyle, 289.

November 2, 1897—P. J. Boyle, 1,934; F. M. Hammett, 1,478; majority for Boyle, 756.

The vote for Congressman in this city in 1896 was: Bull, 2,735; Brown, 737; Ballard, 43; Williams, 33; plurality for Bull, 1,998.

The number of voters on the various ward lists today is as follows:

Wards	Registry	Tax	Total
1	318	618	936
2	266	786	1052
3	297	659	956
4	290	701	991
5	227	668	895
	1317	3432	4749

The vote in the various wards by hours in November, 1896, a Presidential and Congressional as well as municipal election, was as follows:

Hour.	—Wards— 1	2	3	4	5	Total
7:30	93	125	62	80	70	430
12:00	290	478	488	390	250	1706
1:00	350	540	502	400	325	2117
2:00	425	600	456	466	375	2116

The total vote by hours in 1897 was: At 7:30, 171; at noon, 892; at 1 p. m., 1,100, at 2 p. m., 1,865.

THE VOTE IN JAMESTOWN.

The result of the balloting in Jamestown today follows:

For Congressman—Bull, 30; Hogan, 6; Tilley, 4.

For the constitutional amendment—Approve, 21; reject, 21.

BELIEVES THE CZAR SINCERE.

Mr. Stead Has Faith In His Disarmament Proposition.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—William T. Stead, writing to the Daily News from Sebastopol, after having had an interview with the czar at Livadia, reiterates his conviction of the earnestness and sincerity of the czar's purpose in proposing disarmament. Mr. Stead says it is impossible to repeat the conversation, but adds: "My opinion is summed up in a remark which I made to a princess of the court who, meeting me as I was leaving, asked me: 'Well, what is your opinion?'

"I replied simply: 'I thank God for him. If he is spared to Russia, that young man will go far.'"

Mr. Stead adds that he found the czar possessed of exceptional rapidity of perception, with a remarkable memory and a very wide grasp of an immense range of facts.

MINING SUSPENDED.

Four Hundred Persons Snow Bound on Alaskan Passes.

PORT TOWNSEND, Washn., Nov. 8.—The City of Topeka arrived last night from Alaska, bringing 114 passengers. She reports that heavy snowstorms have visited various sections of Alaska and nearly all mining operations have been suspended, except quartz mills located near tidal water. November 2 four feet of snow fell on the Chilkoot and White passes, which completely put a stop to travel. Telephone messages from Lake Lindeman to Skagway announce that about 400 persons are snowbound.

Dynamite in the Mail of a Turkish Consul.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—Two sticks of dynamite weighing nearly half a pound have arrived through the mails on the overland train. The sticks were in separate packages and both were addressed to George E. Hall, Turkish consul, San Francisco. The postmarks were indistinct, but it is thought the dynamite was mailed in Montana. Several weeks ago Mr. Hall received a similar package but it was opened safely.

No Fashoda Debate in the French Deputies.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The Chamber of Deputies resumed its sessions today with a crowded attendance, in anticipation of a debate on the Fashoda question. But those present were disappointed by M. Brunot announcing that he withdrew his interpellation on the subject.

Pittsburg Breweries to Consolidate.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Nov. 8.—Negotiations are in progress for the formation of a corporation, capitalized at about $20,000,000, that will take in all the local breweries. The intention of the promoters is to merge the interests of the sixteen breweries in Alleghany county and operate them as one great company.

DUST "DEVILS" OF THE DESERT

Sand Storm During the British Operations on the Nile.

Our camp consists of nine tents, scattered among dry and stunted mimosas, on which the camels feed with evident relish, writes a war correspondent from the scene of the British operations on the Nile. Beating down upon this arid plain is the fierce sun, which gives a temperature of 120 degrees in the shade. The heat and glare are intolerable. At midday one lies sweltering and gasping under a coating of sweat and sand, eyes, ears and nose are choked with dust, while flies, gnats and nats seek out the tenderest parts. There is no escape from these conditions.

At first one sighs for a breath of wind to cool the burning air, but when it comes the effect is disastrous. A blinding, suffocating cloud of dust springs from the earth, sweeps over the camp and searches out every nook and cranny in hut and tent. It penetrates the most secret recesses of trunks and boxes, mingles with food and drink, and makes a sticky compound of sweat and mud under which the skin smarts and stings. Evening and morning are numbered among the delights of the desert. Under normal conditions they are pleasant enough, but, unhappily, they are too often attended in these parts with violent storms of wind and sand devils. These "devils" are whirlwinds of dust that gather volume and force as they sweep along, cutting fresh particles from the matrix of sandstone rock and driving their myriads of atoms to swell the dust of the desert.

During the last few days we have had several opportunities of observing this process of nature. Last night my blankets were spread under the verandah of the hut. It was a beautiful night. The air was calm, the sky was clear and the moon cast dark shadows of palm and mimosa on the white plain. Under these softening influences of light and sound the desert lost its terrors, and one looked dreamily on the picture until a solemn silence fell upon the camp and sleep sealed the eyelids. A moment later and the scene was changed. A breath of hot wind, as from a furnace, brought every tented sleeper to his feet with a gasp. Instantly the camp was alive with sound and motion. The rush of the storm mingled with the neighing of horses, the groaning of camels, the bleating of goats and the flapping of canvas. The moon was hidden behind a cloud of sand. Sand filled the air—a whirling, rushing hail of atoms. As it swirled around and above the tents, straining ropes, lashing against canvas, tearing tent pegs out of the ground, one began to realize how fragile was the roof overhead, and to be even thankful that it was not more substantial. The sand devil raged for half an hour without damage, save to tent pegs, which flew about rather dangerously. Every moment I expected the tent to collapse and go scudding before the storm. But it held fast, and, covering my head with a blanket, I lay down, smothered in dust, while the struggle between canvas and sand went on, with growing fierceness. The servants, who lay on the sand, slept undisturbed until aroused by their masters.

Then active operations began, and the sharp click of mallets falling on tent pegs was heard through the storm. The tent next to mine was the first to go. It fell, or rather glided, to the ground, and presently there emerged from the wreckage three figures. Finding the position untenable, I made a virtue of necessity and struck my tent before further damage could be done. Having made fast the canvas over my baggage and furniture, I drew my bed into the open, and, wrapping myself in a blanket, lay sweltering and choking until the storm abated. At dawn we were able to remove the traces of this experience. The tents were soon pitched, furniture, clothes and boxes were dug out of the sand, and presently Abdul Hassan, Mahomed and the other servants were "making kitchen" and lighting fires under cover of some dead bushes.—[London Standard.

AROUND RHODE ISLAND.

The ponds and reservoirs about Coventry are filled to overflowing as a result of the recent rains. Sunday the water was running over the dam of the big Flat river reservoir, and the Pawtuxet was over its banks for more than a mile of the distance between the dam and the Washington mill pond. The swamps, too, were full. It is not often at this season of the year that water is so abundant in that section, or the streams swollen to April proportions.

When St. James Protestant Episcopal Church on Broadway, Providence, was struck by lightning and badly burned on the first Sunday in August it was estimated that the work of repair would occupy three months. That estimate has proved to be accurate, for the repairs have been so nearly completed that it is hoped to occupy the structure next Sunday, though it is possible that it will be found necessary to wait a week longer before using the church. For a month or more the church will be without a pipe organ. The instrument that was in the church at the time of the fire was completely destroyed and the construction of a new one had to be delayed until the repairs on the church had nearly reached the point of completion. It is thought that the new organ will be ready for use certainly before Christmas.

John Augustus Brown, commander of Tower Post, No. 17, Grand Army of the Republic, died suddenly at his residence in Pawtucket yesterday afternoon. The deceased was a great-grandson of the John Brown who led the attack upon British brig Gaspee in Narragansett bay at the beginning of the troubles with the mother country which resulted in the Revolutionary war; also a great-grandson of Dr. Slack of Pawtucket, who was associated with Samuel Slater in the early days of the cotton industry. He enlisted three times in the war of the Rebellion, serving in the Second, Tenth and Eleventh Rhode Island regiments. He was elected commander of Tower Post last December, and had served on the staffs of Past Department Commanders Stone and Scott.

The Woonsocket branch of the Sanitary and Relief Association has decided to contribute $50, if needed, for buying turkey dinners for the Rhode Island regiment, and Mayor Batchelor and Postmaster Cass have each contributed $5 to head a general subscription list for that purpose.

Berghman vs. Swinburne, Peckham & Co., a suit to recover damages for loss of a hand in a planing machine, there was a brief hearing on a motion to compel plaintiff to give surety for costs. Mr. Van Slyck of Providence appeared for plaintiff, who has also retained New York counsel, and Mr. Ives for defendants. The court did not require the surety to be given. The trial was set for the first Thursday of the January session.

COPPER COVERED CARS.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad has added a second copper-covered passenger car to its equipment. The first car was put in service some two years ago, and it is said to be apparently in as good condition as when started. The covering of copper is thin, and the color scarcely different from that of other cars on the road. The cost is said to be less than that of paint and varnish. The theory that it would wear longer than paint and varnish seems to be borne out by the trial.

MISS SAMPSON'S WEDDING.

The marriage of Miss Olive Farrington Sampson, daughter of Admiral William T. Sampson, to Mr. Henry Harrison Scott will not occur until January. The affair was to have taken place last month, but owing to the absence of Admiral and Mrs. Sampson, who are in Havana, it was postponed to December. Necessity for further delay has arisen since. Mrs. Sampson will leave Havana about November 10, but it is not expected that the admiral will accompany her. He may be able to attend his daughter's wedding, but if so he will be obliged to return to Havana the next day. The exact date of the wedding has not been agreed upon.

JAPAN AND PERRY.

Nations do not often celebrate their own defeats at the hands of foreigners. Japan, however, proposes to hold high jubilee over the fiftieth anniversary of her more or less forcible opening, which was effected by Commodore Perry. The event was, on the face of it, a defeat and humiliation of Japan. Really, it was the best thing that had happened to her in a thousand years. It led straight to the abolition of the Tycoon system, the granting of a constitution and representative government, and all the marvelous progress that has in a single generation advanced that nation to the foremost ranks of civilization.—[New York Tribune.

GENIUS A "SPORT."

Through all time men of genius have scoffed at and have ridiculed the attempts of purse-proud old "richesse" to create superior orders of manhood. Nor is this a matter for wonder; they were and are ridiculous. Yet these attempts are repeated every hour. Considering them one would suppose that wealth, titles, dignities, are talismans which insure virtue and honor and personal worth and beauty in those to whom they descend. Talismans are ridiculous, and so are titles. Nobility is of blood and not of garters, royal sponsors and christening robes. Pedigrees, portraits and family history, when truthful, tell us a great deal about the nobility of a race. Titles, quarterings and patents are worthless, and the production of a great genius is, in general, as bad a sign as the production of a great profligate. Races that produce geniuses should be avoided; the best is the second best—the normal.

Genius, as some one (Victor Hugo, I think) has finely said, is a promontory stretching out into the ocean of the infinite. Look for the descendants of Shakespeare, Bacon, Macaulay, Wellington, Nelson, Gibbon, Swift, Voltaire, Carlyle, Bonaparte, Goldsmith, Spencer, Milton, Cromwell, Disraeli—to take a few names at random—and you will find that they are not. For the genius is always a transgressor of the normal—a "sport." He is never symmetrical. Such a one Nature likes not, and she makes provision for the extinction of his race.—[The Humanitarian.

SIR JOHN LUBBOCK'S PET WASP.

Perhaps the strangest pet ever kept by man was a wasp, which Sir John Lubbock caught in the Pyrenees and resolved to tame. He began by teaching it to take its meals on his hand, and, although the tiny creature was at first shy of going through its table d'hote on such an unusual festive board, in a very short space of time it grew to expect to be fed in that way.

Sir John preserved this pet with the greatest care. True, it stung him once, but then it had every excuse for doing so. Sir John was examining it on a railway journey, and, the door being opened by a ticket collector, he unceremoniously stuffed it into a bottle, and the outraged Spaniard, not feeling quite at home during the process, gave him a gentle reminder as to the proper way to treat a guest.

The wasp was a pet in every sense of the word, and became so fond of its owner that it allowed itself to be stroked. It enjoyed civilization for just nine months, when it fell ill, and, although Sir John did all he could to prolong its life, it died. Many wasps have been under Sir John's observation, but he has never had such a genuine pet as this one.—[Chums.

YOU CANNOT CURE PILES

By Internal Remedies.

The only way to cure piles in every form is to use a remedy like the Pyramid Pile Cure which is applied directly to the parts affected and its wonderful healing effects are felt on the first application because the medical properties are rapidly absorbed by the sensitive membranes of the rectum and the cure is speedily made, and almost before the patient is aware of it, every trace of piles has left him.

This is one reason why the Pyramid Pile Cure has been so successful. It is applied directly where it is needed and where it will do the most good. Not by the roundabout way of the stomach nor by the harsh, barbarous methods of various surgical operations and so called systems.

Its advantages over all other pile cures are these: It cures without pain, the cure is lasting, it contains no poison and is the quickest and cheapest cure yet found. It is made by the Pyramid Drug Co. of Marshall, Mich., and sold by all druggists at one dollar per package.

"FAKED" DOGS.

Methods Used to Get Prize Winners for the Shows.

Time was when dog shows were associated with beer and the churchwarden pipe in an East End or wayside public house, when the owner of a champion bulldog fed his pet on a pound of rump steak and let his family starve upon a crust. The dog, too, got all the kicks. In our days we have changed all that. The old-time dog show still obtains, and you may occasionally see it advertised in the sporting papers; but there are two powerful associations who each in their way, with wealthy purses, have improved the lot of the modern-day dog, and given him a social status.

But with all the power of these two associations against them, the tricks and dodges of the dog fakirs of old still obtain. They have simply changed their coats. The dog fakir of the past, to get a very small breed of pet dogs, kept the lungs of the animals closed by compression in puppyhood, and by plugging the nostrils at stated times stopped a proper system of respiration. The modern fakir takes the relics of the older days and inbreeds from the smallest type of dog, and regulates the feeding of his animals.

To make the eyes of toy spaniels large, bulgy and round, and the coats a rich color, the animals were kept among the beer barrels in the public-house cellars in perpetual darkness, while the spaniel pups were "helped" in the matter of becoming very short-nosed by having the bones surrounding the nose pressed to the head while they were in a soft and tender cartilage state. Today these methods are not so necessary, for a long course of "faking" through many generations has at last produced the malformation as a permanent type; but in the spaniel and many other breeds of dog the type striven for is still "helped."

When the modern bulldog is chosen from a litter of pups the loosest-skinned is marked out to work upon, and then, to put it kindly, "the fun begins." As the pup gets along in life he is submitted to a process of skin-pulling, until his head is one mass of wrinkled skin and hanging rolls of fat. Painless, of course, but still it is "faking." The more unscrupulous give an artificial kink to the puppy's tail by breaking the vertebræ where nature has forgotten to do it, and pulling the forelegs out at elbow to give breadth of chest and general all-round looseness of appearance; but this is confined to a few.

Bloodhounds, too, and pugs both have to be "helped" at times, if nature does not conform to the fashion. Landseer's lovely big-eyed bloodhound in his picture "Dignity and Impudence" is not to the taste of modern connoisseurs. He must be padded with roll upon roll of loose skin; his ears must hang low down, and the eyes be all but sightless, hidden away, as they are, in overhanging brows.

Most people will notice how beautifully the highly bred collie drops his ears over. Well, there be dog-fakirs, who keep in the dark, who, if they happen to possess a good pup whose ears are too strong, and consequently will not drop over, run a needle through the ear under the skin, and keep the head in splints, as it were, for some time until the ears drop.

Other methods are followed to weaken the nerves of the ears. Sometimes a drop of acid is put on the nerve, and the ears are pulled and flaps of weighted wood are fastened to them.

Other ways of faking dogs include the pulling out of white fur and the dyeing of patches of white too big to be pulled out. Cropping and docking still flourish openly, although the Kennel Club rules are framed to stop all faking.

It is left, however, for woman to do a great work in stamping out the arts and dodges of a bygone, unenlightened time, and in the Ladies' Kennel Association we possess a power for good which will ultimately effect a great purpose in doing away with all fakes and fads of dog dealers.—[London Mail.

THE HOUSEMAID SHOULD ALWAYS LOOK TRIM.

There is nothing more important, so far as the elegance of a house is concerned, than to have the maids neatly dressed. It is fatal to let domestics wash their clothes, or part of them, at home. If this is the case there will be a dreadful lack of clean aprons, and the cotton dresses will be made to do duty for a fortnight. All laundries will take servants' washing at a certain sum per week. In the country one can often get this done cheaply, especially if the maids will wash their own collars and cuffs and caps. In a town it costs more, but it is money well spent.

It is imperative that a maid should have a clean print dress every week, and that it be well starched, or it will not keep clean for any length of time. The cook, especially in a town, should wear a somewhat dark print, a deep blue gulates being the best. This looks very nice with a large holland apron and white collar and cap.

For morning wear large holland aprons are the best, with bibs and straps over the shoulders. A black stuff gown should be worn in the afternoon, with turnover collar and cuffs and a very large white apron. If there is any demur about the caps it will be worth the mistress' while to provide them herself. The best caps are made of frills of embroidered cambric, which draw up with a tape and can be pulled out flat to be washed and ironed. These are easily made, and all fear of the maids appearing with a dirty piece of lace gathered up on their heads is avoided. It must be understood that when the housemaid is out and the cook has to answer the door she also wears the same sort of costume.—[Philadelphia Press.

BEARS SLY AS FOXES.

In his native home the polar bear does not often meet with small boys anxious to treat him to buns and other dainties. The consequence is that Bruin has to devise many curious ways of securing his food, and none are more strange and interesting that that related by two trustworthy travelers in Greenland, that country of strange sights.

They have known the polar bear to take a stone or a huge lump of ice in his fore paws and, from a favorable height, as a cliff or precipitous ice hill, to hurl the missile down upon the head of a walrus—an enormous brute, often twice the size of the bear—and so stun him that Bruin could rush in and complete the destruction at his leisure, thus securing a month's rations.

The most useful food of the ice bear, as the Germans very appropriately call this beast, is the common seal of the Arctic regions. The latter is the wariest animal of the North, and both Eskimo and polar bear need their best strategy to catch it.

In the summer-time, when the snow is off the ice of the ocean shore and inlets, the seals can be plainly seen as black dots on the ice, probably asleep, but always near their holes, which lead down through the thick ice to the water below, and into which they can throw themselves by the least movement. Bruin, seeing one afar, walks up as near as he deems safe, and then begins crawling on his wary prey.

The seal, if the weather be sunny and pleasant, takes short naps, relieved by shorter moments when it is scanning the vicinity for signs of an enemy's approach. During these times the bear is very quiet and as still as death itself, with eyes apparently closed, though really a corner of each is kept open, and in this way he hopes the seal will take him for a heap of snow, an appearance which his coat readily helps him to assume.

During the naps he creeps forward with greater or less rapidity, according to his nearness to the seal and consequent fear of being heard or seen. When but ten or twelve yards away, and the seal is in the depths of a good nap, the bear rushes upon him, and with a single blow of his powerful paw knocks the smaller brute senseless, and so far away from the hole in the ice and connecting at the top of the dome with an aperture about the size of a shilling, called the blow hole, for it is through this that the seal breathes when he is in want of fresh air.

Here the bear watches for many a long hour, if necessary, and when the snorts of the seal are heard he crushes in the fragile dome of the snow house with his paw, impaling the seal on his curved claws, and proceeds to practically demonstrate how a polar bear can subsist in an Arctic winter.—[London Telegraph.

ON THE FALL RIVER LINE.

The patrons of the famous Fall River line, of which George Dolree is general supervisor of construction, are enjoying a season of fine weather for journeying either East or West. The writer went hence the other night on the elegant flagship Priscilla for the first time in a year, the trip being the height of comfort and pleasure. Thousands of people, many of whom have never before become aware of the fact, are discovering that the steamboat service of the Fall River line is fully as satisfactory, desirable and pleasing, so far as its methods of transportation are concerned, in the cold as in the warm months. The truth becomes even more evident as the season progresses, until even the dead of winter adds to the proof of these assertions. Especially at mid-autumn are the Long Island Sound routes delightful; nor are their pleasing features lessened, so far as the enjoyments of natural scenes and situations are concerned, until the winter months have taken place, and the reign of the frost king is begun. And even then the comforts, safety and satisfactory features of the Fall River line travel are not lessened, but only changed from those of summer time, as the great hotels on land change from piazza and lawn to indoor life at these seasons of the year.

On the night in question there was a large party aboard, making a scene that might be likened unto an enormous household, and wonderfully enchanting as one gazed down from the upper saloon. Rich's orchestra claimed the attention of the assemblage until 10 o'clock and rendered ten pleasing numbers, and judging from the applause they were appreciated.

Earlier in the evening the beautifully arranged and artistically decorated dining saloon, the chief officer of which, in a highly becoming uniform, is Edward Vose Westcott, attending to nothing but business, was the centre of gravitation. Nothing could well surpass the elegance of appointment and aesthetic surroundings of this department. A source of satisfaction is the well trained waiters, under William S. Shepherd, head waiter, who have held the position for a number of years, giving always much attention to the proper seating of guests and of whole families. The chef, Nicholas Leuck, whom we should not forget, has held the position for some twenty years, and to serve such a high-class menu must be a man of much ability and good training. I notice too that those who were stationed at the head of the stairways to attend upon the passengers were always to be found where they belonged and that order and discipline were maintained to the end.

Stephen A. Gardner, so well and favorably known in Newport, has somewhat recently been promoted to the position of general superintendent of the entire system, which place he is said to be fully competent to occupy.—[Lyford, in Hotel Gazette.

OUT-OF-DOOR LIVING.

The love of living "near to nature" is instinct in every heart. But long confinement, illness, or much pressing and exhausting indoor work may deaden our pleasure in out-of-door life. Or we may be so fascinated with indoor occupations, or so engrossed with study, that we have no energy left for a brisk walk or row or an out-of-door game. Or perhaps we have foolishly grown to think out-of-door sports suitable for only boys or children.

Yet it is very certain that no normal or healthy woman should be ignorant of the charm and advantage of out-of-door living. There is no better or easier way to keep both body and spirit in good condition than a regular daily amount of out-of-door exercise. It is a deplorable mistake to consider walking only a means of reaching a nearby neighbor's house or a convenient shop. Walking is much more than that. It is a means to obtain health and beauty, and, where no other form of athletic exercise is obtainable, that surely is within reach of all. To train our bodies and muscles in regular and scientific ways is not only interesting work, it makes us healthier women, and health brings more enjoyment in living; and that conduces to beauty, as well as strength of form and face, always.

Women have special need of all the bodily health and vitality they can get. The pressing indoor duties of which most of us have our share, are easier and better done when we can bring to them the freshened vigor we have gained out of doors. Keen breezes and bright sunshine penetrate both the mental and the physical being, and open the entire nature to healthful influences.—[Harper's Bazar.

THE EGYPTIAN'S HOSPITALITY.

The Egyptian of today may easily be surpassed in honesty, courage and the manlier virtues; yet in hospitality and politeness he stands pre-eminent. No Egyptian sits down to a meal without asking all passers-by to partake of it; during his thirty days' fast every year his doors are open to all—no introduction is needed; to the poor he gives ungrudgingly.

Though allowed to have four wives, the effendi is almost always a monogamist. Marrying early, he is, as a rule, a good husband and father, and fond of and kind to his children.

To show the direction in which the ideas of marriage are setting, we may say that one of the first teachers in Mohammedan law in Egypt some time ago laid down this maxim, that the prophet has allowed four wives to any man who would engage to love all four alike, but, as he had never met any one capable of doing so, he would recommend one wife as the interpretation of the prophet's words; indeed, the relations of the wife to resent a man's marrying again that it is hardly ever done.

In abstinence from drinking to excess the whole Egyptian nation stands head and shoulders above us. The hospitality of the sheikhs, or village headmen, is boundless, and takes the shape of feasts at which Athelstane might have presided and Cedric been entertained, and both found themselves at home.

We have seen men sit down to a banquet of twenty-one courses, where a huge turkey was the seventeenth course; and the first course alone consisted of a whole sheep, inside which was a goose, inside that a chicken, then a pigeon, and finally an egg, which last was presented to the principal guest, as containing the essence of all.

The weakest point of the Egyptian's armor is his lack of courage, and very feeble idea of what fair play means. An Egyptian Effendi, or man of the upper classes, told with great satisfaction of a duel one of his countrymen had with an Italian, in which the Egyptian chose clubs as the weapon to fight with, and then disabled the right hand of the Italian by a sudden blow before the duel had begun. He actually could see nothing to blame in his countryman, but rather commended his promptness in action.

On the other hand, recent events in the Soudan have shown that the Egyptian makes a good fighting man, provided he has faith in his officers, and is not called upon to act for himself. Pearson's Weekly.

THE PINEAPPLE AS A FIBRE PLANT.

Pineapple culture is already a flourishing industry in the Sisal hemp region. A pineapple plant matures but one apple in a season, and after the harvest of fruit the old leaves are of no further use to the plant, and may be removed. The leaves have the same structural system as the agaves—that is, they are composed of a cellular mass through which the fibres extend, and when the epidermis and pulpy matter are eliminated the residue is a soft, silk-like filament, the value of which has long been recognized. Only fifty pounds of this fibre can be obtained from a ton of leaves, but, as the product would doubtless command double the price of Sisal hemp, its production would be profitable.

How to secure this fibre cheaply is the problem. The Sisal hemp machines are too rough in action for so fine a fibre, and, at the rate of ten leaves to the pound, working up a ton of material would mean the handling of over twenty thousand leaves to secure perhaps three dollars' worth of the commercial product. Were the fibre utilized in the arts, however, and its place established, it would compete in a measure with flax as a spinning fibre, for its filaments are divisible to the ten-thousandth of an inch. The substance has already been utilized to a slight extent in Eastern countries (being hand-prepared) in the manufacture of costly, filmy, cobweb-like fabrics that will almost float in air.—[C. R. Dodge, in Appleton's Popular Science Monthly.

ANNUAL PORTRAIT SHOW.

The artists' and executive committees of the portrait show, which will open at the National Academy of Design December 14, for the benefit of the Orthopædic Hospital, have already received many favorable replies to their requests for the loan of desirable pictures for the exhibition. Unlike the successful portrait shows of 1891 and 1895, the exhibition this year is entirely an invitation affair. The artists' committee does not act as a jury to whom pictures may be sent for approval, and only those portraits asked for by the management from artists and owners will be shown.

It will be principally a woman's portrait show, but one room will be devoted to portraits of men notable on account of the artist or the individual, or both, and there will be many portraits of children. The best of the foreigners who have been here recently and have painted portraits of New York women will be well represented. Portraits by Carolus Duran, Madrazo and Boldini have been secured, and assurances have also been given of the loan of notable portraits by representative American artists living here and by those living abroad. In the last three or four years many old masters have been brought to this country, and numerous portraits by them of men and women will be shown. They include the works of Rembrandt, Frans Hals, Gainsborough, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Sir Thomas Lawrence and Romney. The pictures will be hung according to the group system, as in Paris.—[New York Tribune.

Druggists and grocers sell it."

Kindling Wood delivered to any part of the city, 4 barrels for one dollar. It is nice, dry, clean pine wood, cut from clean kiln-dried forest trees. THE BAND'S BAZAR.

Week's Entertainment Formally Opened by Major Boyle.

Masonic hall was last evening the scene of the gathering of a large crowd to attend the opening of the week's bazar and vaudeville entertainment given by the Newport band. The hall was prettily decorated with American flags gracefully draped in great profusion about the walls, and the booths, which were arranged along the sides of the hall, were draped with vari-colored cut papers. The hall was lighted by long strings of red, white and blue electric lamps, which gave a pleasing effect. A stage for the vaudeville entertainment was erected at the north end, with the fortune teller's tent in the northeast corner, and on the east and west sides were the tables at which domestic articles, fancy goods, flowers, lemonade, soda water, cake and candy were sold. The ice cream room in one of the anterooms was popular and the shooting gallery in the basement had many visitors. There were a number of novel features which attracted their share of attention, and the vaudeville, which was open to all, was well received.

Early in the evening the band made a short street parade to escort the members of the city government and the Newport Artillery to the fair. His Honor Mayor Boyle and six members of the City Council, with a large number of members of the Artillery, marched to the hall, where Mayor Boyle was introduced and made a brief speech formally opening the fair. Then all formalities were over and the guests began to make the bazar lively. There was a good attendance for the opening night and the receipts were satisfactory.

The vaudeville entertainment introduced Philip Fitzgerald in dances, Coogan and Bissell in songs and sketches and Russell and Rounds in song and dance specialties. The audience was liberal with its applause and demanded a number of encores.

Later in the evening the floor was cleared for dancing and a large number remained to enjoy the music furnished by the Harry K. Howard orchestra.

Tonight the manager has arranged to furnish bulletins of the city and various state elections, which will be announced to the attendants by means of a megaphone.

TO BUILD THE CITY HALL FOUNDATION.

The joint special committee on city hall last evening opened bids for the construction of the foundation walls of the new building, as follows: Morgan Brothers, $4,473; Friend & Maguire, $4,705; Radford & Booth, $4,981; Harry Wilson, $5,238.

The committee will recommend to the City Council that the contract be awarded to Morgan Brothers, the lowest bidders, and voted to request the mayor to call a special council meeting for Tuesday next, November 15, that the contract may be awarded and no time be lost in commencing the work. The contractors will be allowed six weeks from the completion of the excavation in which to build the foundation, and it is hoped to have the work completed before heavy frosts.

AN AMERICAN SPY WEYLER'S GUEST.

That the spy sent by the United States government to Spain during the war should have become the guest of Weyler himself seems incredible, yet there is nothing more true. The government selected as its agent a man of position who has lived much in Germany. It was necessary to have a trained intellect that would make no mistakes. His story is told in the November Cosmopolitan, and the most exciting pages of Dumas's fiction seem tame in comparison with the facts. Crossing the frontier in a first-class carriage, he was by a trifling accident brought into conversation with a young Spanish nobleman; presently who should come along but the son of General Weyler. This acquaintance led to his receiving many attentions from Weyler when they reached Madrid, and the general actually gave up a day to a trip to the Escurial.

THE DUPONT AND THE MORRIS.

Torpedo boat Dupont was at Pinniger & Manchester's wharf this morning, coaling. She then returned to the Torpedo Station and in a day or two her crew and officers will be detached. The Dupont and the Morris, with only their engineer forces attached, will then become a portion of the Station's equipment for the training of seamen gunners, who will be exercised on board as torpedo boat crews, thus giving them still further practical instruction in their duties. The vessel is in fine condition, and though the department contends that her engines are broken down she made the fastest run on record up the Sound.

NEWPORT CHRYSANTHEMUMS FOR BOSTON.

Mr. Robert Laurie, head gardener for Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and several assistants were at work all last night preparing a chrysanthemum exhibit for the Boston Horticultural Society's Show, which opens in that city today. Three mammoth boxes were built for the flowers, each plant being so arranged as not to touch the others, the device being the invention of Mr. Laurie. Before being packed the stems were placed in water for 48 hours. There are thirty-five varieties and the total number shipped was one hundred and fifty.

The order to send the shipment was given by Mr. Vanderbilt, who has always taken a great interest in the Boston show, at which he was awarded many prizes last year. The gardener and an assistant accompanied the exhibit to Boston this morning.

In the collection were a few fine specimens to be exhibited by Mr. H. McKay Twombly, brother-in-law of Mr. Vanderbilt. Mr. Laurie will remain in Boston until the close of the show, Friday.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

First Rhode Island Regiment to Move to Columbia, S. C.

Adjutant General Corbin confirms the report that the First Rhode Island regiment will not be at Camp Meade Thanksgiving day. The movement of the troops to the various Southern camps, which began yesterday, will, according to General Corbin, proceed as rapidly as possible, two regiments leaving Middletown each day. At this rate Camp Meade will be deserted in eleven days, and the turkeys for the Rhode Island boys' Thanksgiving dinner will have to be sent to Columbia, S. C.

On his attention being called to the report that General Young had requested that the Second corps be allowed to remain in the North until time for them to proceed direct to Cuba, General Corbin said that the department knew nothing of the matter beyond what had been published in the newspapers. The request, if made officially, could not be granted, he said, as the movement of the troops south would not be delayed if the department could help it, on account of the complaints of cold in their present quarters which the men are making.

The fund for the purchase of turkeys for the Thanksgiving dinner for the First Rhode Island regiment has boomed from its inception, and yesterday's contributions amounted to $208, bringing the total to $308. There is little doubt that the $900 or $1,000 needed will be subscribed in a very short time.

Governor Dyer has received the following telegram from Camp Meade: "Regiment starts for Columbia next Sunday. Your arrangements for Thanksgiving very liberal and pleasing."

Orders were issued last evening by General Young for the movement of the Second army corps to the new camps in the South. The movement will begin Thursday with the departure of the Thirty-fifth Michigan and the Second Tennessee, and will be completed the following Wednesday. A hospital car will be attached to each regimental train, and a medical officer will accompany each section. The headquarters of the various brigades and divisions will be shipped in advance of corps headquarters. The First Rhode Island and Second West Virginia will move Sunday, the former for Columbia, S. C., and the latter for Greenville, S. C.

OPENED WITH "HELD BY THE ENEMY."

Last evening the Joseph Greene Company opened a week of repertoire at the Opera House before an audience that completely filled the house. It was the largest paid audience on an opening night of such a company that the house has seen. The play presented, "Held by the Enemy," is one that has frequently been presented here by Freshman companies, and considerable interest was taken by those present in the ability of Mr. Greene's organization to give a good performance. This curiosity was fully satisfied, for the performance from first to last was satisfactory, the company seeming fully equal to the exacting demands of the piece and the scenic effects being good.

Between the acts specialty work was done in so clever a manner that there was very little going out. Kinney and Minock gave a good exhibition of trick bicycle riding, little Maud Wheelock sang and danced pleasingly, the Little Saville sisters gave songs and imitations of noted dancers, and Frank Whittier in coon specialties pleased everybody.

Tonight "A Plain Old Irishman" will be presented, with Mr. Greene as Con McGuire. Tomorrow afternoon's matinee will see "The New Partner," an old-time favorite here.

Captain Chester of cruiser Cincinnati and a board of officers Friday visited the wreck of Spanish cruiser Cristobal Colon, spending several hours at the scene, and finally decided that work on the sunken warship should be abandoned, as, in their opinion, there is no possible chance of saving her. The men of the wrecking company who have been at work on the Spanish vessels have been ordered to proceed to Santiago harbor, there to raise the Reina Mercedes and blow up the Merrimac so as to clear the channel, as both these vessels somewhat impede navigation.
